A complete victory was won by the Crane-Weeks machine forces at the Republican State convention in Tremont Temple today.

The platform as finally adopted in the face of strong objection offered by the greatly outnumbered progressive element of the delegates present is practically as Crane and Weeks wanted it.

In sharp contrast with the Republican platform was that adopted at the Democratic convention in Faneuil Hall today, the most progressive which Massachusetts Democrats have ever framed.

The Republican platform as accepted contains the following planks of importance:

Constitutional convention.
Short ballot.
Biennial elections.
Hearings for public servants assigned for removal from office.
Taxation reform to be left to the discretion of Legislature.
Executive budget system.
Shorter legislative sessions and a smaller Blue Book.
Reasonable hours and conditions of labor, especially in those industries continuously operating for twenty-four hours.
Investigation or some system of social insurance which will protect the home life against the hazards of sickness, irregular employment and old age.

No reference to made to the initiative and referendum, the recall, equal suffrage or prohibition.

The labor and insurance planks were reported by the committee on resolutions and adopted after a bitter fight, lasting over two and a half hours.

PLANK FOR BIRD.

The labor plank is designed to meet Charles S. Bird's demand for an eight-hour day for tour workers in paper

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—It cleared up in great style and the Red Sox and Senators were able to square off in their twin bills at National Park this afternoon. Washington, just like Boston, knows that the American League season is over, and the Saturday crowd was anything but a buxom one. When the curtain went up on the first show there scarcely 700 "fans" on hand.

Carrigan made good his forecast to give Joe Wood a chance to show whether or not he's to be considered an important starter in the World's Series, or to have Fuster, Shore, Ruth and Leonard, who know not what it is to have a lame arm and who pitched the Red Sox through to the American League pennant, do the heavy work in the forthcoming battles with the Phillies, by sending the renowned right-hander to the firing line in the first encounter.

Walter Johnson showed on the slab for the Senators. With Barry in Boston and Speaker in New York, Janvrin showed on second, while Shorten was stationed in centre.

This is the first Wood-Johnson duel

Women's Skirts, Short Now, to Be Still Shorter

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The old advice, "Look straight ahead," may not be followed by the masculine gender in the future. The gleaming orbs of the male population are likely to slant downwards. All this because it is decreed that women's skirts are to be even shorter. Frank Pr ghton, manager of the Maison Lewis, London, says: "I just returned from Paris." Here is what he says of the new fashions:

Skirts are to be much shorter; the models are pleated, and some are made with godets, together with bolero waists, both short and long. With these dresses it is expected very high boots will be worn, laced at the side, bright brown being the favorite color. Small hats will be most popular, although many large shapes will be worn later. The feather will also return. Some of the trimmings of the small hats are in the shape of a garter, made in the same coloring in beads placed around the centre of the crown.

40 American Women in Peril in Mexico

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 — Forty American women in Cananea, Mexico, are in grave peril, according to State Department advices today. The town, which is in northern Sonora, has been without military protection of any kind for eight days. The lawless elements are said to be in full control. Besides the forty American women there are 400 American men there. The State Department took occasion again to warn Americans to leave that country and to stay out of it. It had been reported that some American women who had left there were going to return.

ROYAL ROOTERS LIKELY TO GET SOME SEATS

President Joe Lannin of the Red Sox has won his fight for accommodations for the Royal Rooters at the games in Philadelphia.

Mr. Lannin telephoned from New York today that President Baker of the Philadelphia club had agreed to furnish some tickets.

Mr. Lannin went to New York with blood in his eye. He let it be known that he had got some tickets. President Baker agreed to give them to him. I don't know how Mr. Lannin worked it, but there'll be a good crowd of Rooters hitting the Philadelphia trail next week."

President Baker of Philadelphia was willing to give the Boston fans all the seats they wanted—at $5 per seat.

Lannin couldn't see things that way. He said before going to New York for the meeting today:

"I propose that the men who have supported my club are not going to be imposed upon. Either I will secure the necessary space allotment through the National Commission or there will be no World's Series.

"It's a downright shame, and you can say that I don't propose to stand for it."

Westinghouse Men Vote Not to Strike

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 2.—The employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company have voted not to strike. The result of the vote was announced this morning by Robert W. Nelson, chairman of the grievance committee of the employes.

ALLIES IN DRIVE ON LENS

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—After allowing the Germans to exhaust themselves in counter attacks, the allies have begun a fresh series of assaults south of Ypres, between the La Basse Canal and Arras, and in the Champagne and Argonne regions.

The British and French are now within striking distance of the Germans defending the important railroad town of Lens.

Renewed assaults by the allies here resulted in further gains in Artois and the Champagne region, it is officially announced by the French War Office today.

Southeast of Souchez, the French have advanced at La Folie Heights. Another success north of Le Mesnil in the Champagne is also reported. La Folie lies just south of the Givenchy woods, where the French after stubborn fighting dislodged the Germans from their trenches near the Arras-Lens road.

The zone of fighting north of Le Mesnil is near the scene of the terrific combats around Hill 193 and Massiges, where the French are driving against German lines of communication.

The text of today's official communique follows:

"In Artois the enemy's artillery opened a very violent bombardment upon our positions to the east of Souchez. Nevertheless we have made

DRAG POND FOR LYNN GIRL

The Lynn police prepared today to drag the waters of Sluice Pond, and 150 Boy Scouts searched Lynn woods, for Miss Edith Broughton, who has disappeared after what her sisters describe as previous attempts at suicide.

About a month ago, the sisters told the police, the girl tried to kill herself, but failed.

A week later she stayed out all night and, returning in the morning,

Ancients Leave for Richmond, Va.

The members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company have departed for Richmond, Va., where they will be guests at banquets, balls and a Fete Champetre, under the auspices of Governor Stuart at the Executive Mansion. They marched from Faneuil Hall to the South Station in the driving rain to embark upon their journey. At Richmond, they were to be met by the Richmond Light Infantry Blues.

Heavy Northeast Gale Along Cape

BUZZARDS BAY, Oct. 2.—The heaviest storm of the season whipped the Cape today. The wind was between sixty and seventy miles an hour, northeast, with a driving rain. Not a vessel stirred. The sea was tremendous. Thirteen life-saving crews were on duty along the Cape to Provincetown.

Estimate 300 to 500 Dead in Gulf Storm

By International News Service.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 2.—Latest estimates today are that the death toll of the great storm that ravaged the Louisiana and Mississippi coast will go to 500.

To date there have been more than 300 listed dead. Fifty of these are along the Mississippi coast. Twenty-two are in New Orleans. From other places named dead have been tabulated as follows: Pranier, La., twenty-three; Labranche, La., thirty-five; Shell Beach, La., fifteen; Lower Coast, La., twenty-three; Delacroix, La., twenty-two; Rigolets, La., twenty-one; Lake Catherine, La., twenty-two. From a score of different points have come reports of from one to half a dozen deaths. These are not verified, but generally are credited.

Memphis estimates the total dead at 549, with 400 persons still missing, and the property damage at $7,000,000.

Braves' Final Game with Phillies Off

BRAVES FIELD, Oct. 2.—Rain caused the final game of the year between the Braves and the National League champion Phillies to be called off today. Pat Moran will lead his winners out of town tomorrow and they will not be seen here again till they stack up against the clan of Carrigan in the third game of the World's Series.

The early morning showers did not wet the diamond enough to cause a postponement, but when the downpour just before noon came, the management decided to call the game off.

Bryan Asked About Running; Angry

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 2.—Former Secretary of State William J. Bryan, who arrived here today to deliver a lecture on "Peace," became very angry when reporters asked him if he would be a candidate for President again. "That question is both impertinent and foolish," exclaimed Mr. Bryan as he dismissed the reporters.

WORLD'S SERIES OPENS OCT. 8

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The first game of the World's Series between the Philadelphia Nationals and the Boston Americans will be played at Philadelphia Friday, October 8.

The second game also will be played in the Quaker City the following day, Saturday, October 9.

The third and fourth games will be played in Boston on Monday, October 11, and Tuesday, October 12.

The fifth game will be played at Philadelphia October 13, the sixth at Boston October 14, and the place for the seventh game, if necessary, will be decided by the tossing of a coin.

President Lannin of Boston lost the toss for the place of the opening game. A quarter was flipped by Nagle Rawlins, a Philadelphia newspaperman. Lannin cried "Tails." hTe coin came down heads.

President Tener of the National League then proposed to the commission that the first game be played on October 8, and Ban Johnson, president mills, which was bitterly opposed by former United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane, the boss of the G. O. P. organization.

CRANE REFUSES 8-HOUR DAY PLANK

The social insurance plank is a substitute for an old age pension plank which the Progressives desire.

Both of these planks, it was said, were unsatisfactory to Charles R. Burbank, the Progressive member of the resolutions committee and spokesman for Charles S. Bird. Mr. Burbank said he would issue a statement later.

An attempt by former Governor Foss to secure the adoption of a plank favoring the submission of the prohibition question to the voters was forced out, after a short fight, by a vote of 1,042 to 295.

Mr. Foss addressed the convention from the platform in favor of the plank, and declared that refusal to adopt it would mean the defeat of the Republican candidates at the coming election.

Senator Ezra W. Clark of Brockton and Rev. A. E. Johnson of Everett, both delegates, favored the plank. The latter said: "We who favor prohibition would like to stand with the party, but we want to stand with a party that is right on this vital issue.

REJECT ANTI-LOAN PLANK.

The convention, by an overwhelming vote, also rejected a plank offered by former Senator Frank Sutherlick of Boston in behalf of the American Peace Society, opposing further extension of American money to belligerents. Mr. Selberlich took the floor in favor of his plank and said:

"President Wilson said a few months back that a loan was a violation of neutrality. But in the past few days he has changed his mind. There is not a railroad in the country that could not use the money and not an industry that would not prosper if the money were kept here. This country, by permitting the loan, is staying into the hands of the New York underwriters who get their two per cent. commission on the $500,000,000."

In opposition to the prohibition plank, Congressman Gillett, chairman of the resolutions committee, said:

"There is a wide division of opinion in the Republican party over the question of prohibition and the adoption of such a plank would create further dissension that would be damaging to the welfare of the party."

Samuel W. McCall, the Republican nominee for governor, was given a rousing reception when he arose to address the convention immediately after the adoption of the platform. He said in part: "You have this day adopted a forward-looking platform which meets with my full approval and upon which I squarely stand. We welcome the co-operation of that splendid body of men who have as leaders Charles Innes, Bird and Joseph Walker. Trojan or Tyrian, Progressive or Republican, will be treated by us with no distinction.

"The men who think alike upon the great questions of government will, I believe, vote alike this year, and with no side issues we shall triumphantly carry the election in November. Such a result will be big with fate to the prosperity of the Commonwealth; it will be a glorious harbinger of a good omen for the country in the great national battle upon which we are about to enter."

ENDORSE WILSON.

The adoption of a strong progressive platform, the longest in the history of the party, was the big feature of the Democratic State convention in Faneuil Hall. Enthusiastic endorsement of the Wilson administration and the excellent work of Governor David I. Walsh during his two terms as chief executive of the State stand out prominently in the platform.

Governor Walsh was given a tremendous reception by the delegates upon his appearance. The administration lasted almost half an hour and subsided only at the urgent request of the popular young Governor. There was waving of American flags, tooting of horns and everything else to make the demonstration a record one.

The following are the chief planks in the Democratic platform adopted by the resolutions committee after a prolonged session that was not adjourned until 1:30 and which will be accepted by the convention:

Indorse President Wilson's policies.

Praise administration of Governor Walsh.

Favor adequate preparation for the national defence.

State budget system with power in Governor to veto specific items in appropriation bills.

Tax reform.

Abolition of poll tax.

Constitutional convention.

Abolition of Executive Council.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

Initiative and referendum.

Cities and towns furnish free halls for political rallies and State to furnish printed circulars for candidates.

Permit voters unable to be home for election to vote by mail.

Make commissioners responsible to Governor.

Home rule for cities and towns.

Roll-calls on all important legislative measures.

Protest any increase in common carrier freight rates or passenger fares unless unquestioned seeking such increases have been honestly capitalized and honestly and economically managed.

Thorough investigation by Public Service Commission of telephone charges, rates and service in the Commonwealth.

Development of water power facilities.

Reforestation and reclamation of waste lands.

Liberal expenditures by the State for building highways through farming communities and extension of State and county agricultural schools.

Investigation of milk situation.

Extend civil service to help-working men on secure homes.

Savings bank life insurance.

Non-contributory old age pensions.

Prison reform.

Extension of free popular education courses through the correspondence educational system.

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR FIGHT.

After a committee of 36, nearly twice the group home, resolutions were presented.

They did not mention woman suffrage. The suffrage plank had been lost by one vote in a committee of 25. There was no mention of prohibition. No one spoke before the committee for prohibition. No one spoke against it. It came up at all.

Governor Walsh praised the platform as the best they have ever had. He thought the most important plank was the one on regulation of rates of transportation and other public service corporations.

The resolutions were presented to the convention by Chairman Thomas J. Boynton of the resolutions committee.

No sooner had the chairman reached them than Mayor Gaynor of Winchester jumped up and offered four resolutions in succession. They were:

To strike out the indorsement of President Wilson for 1916.

To indorse woman suffrage.

To indorse President Wilson for the merchant marine bills.

To oppose loans to belligerents.

On the last one Mr. Tuck said he offered it "following the lead of our great and only peerless leader, William Jennings Bryan."

Several groans were heard, mingled with laughter. Someone sounded a Bronx cheer. All four Tuck resolutions were tabled.

The two resolutions were called to order more than an hour after the scheduled time for opening. The delay on the part of the Democrats was due to a prolonged session of the resolutions committee.

CUSHING CHAIRMAN.

The G. O. P. convention was called to order at 11:20 by Chairman Edward A. Cushing of the Republican State Committee, who predicted a triumphant victory for the State ticket and denied that the party had any bosses other than the "common people." Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing was introduced as permanent chairman. The latter was defeated by Samuel W. McCall for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

He delivered an address in which he predicted Republican success, and declared his intention to support the ticket. He urged all his friends to do likewise. He declared that Republican success was necessary in order to place the State and nation "once more on a sound administrative basis." He said:

"The abolition of party enrolment has proven a failure. If the people are unwilling to restore party registration, the only logical thing to do is to abolish primaries altogether and to have one election, allowing any candidate who procures a given number of signatures to place his name on the ballot. The direct primary law has proved conclusively that direct nominations and annual elections cannot exist together.

GRATEFUL TO WILSON.

"The people are, I believe, profoundly grateful to President Wilson for having kept them out of war, but this feeling of relief cannot blind them to the fact that, taken as a whole the national administration has been inefficient and a failure and has cost the confidence of the people."

M'CALL TELLS BIRD FOR CRANE NO 8-HOUR PLANK IS PERSISTENT

Former United States Senator W. Murray Crane, the Boss of the Republican party, served notice upon Charles Sumner Bird last night that he would not stand for an eight-hour day plank in the Republican platform.

Samuel W. McCall, the Republican candidate for Governor, acted as the mouthpiece for "Uncle Murray."

Mr. McCall informed Mr. Bird of Mr. Crane's ultimatum from a room at the Copley-Plaza, occupied by the Committee on Resolutions of the Republican State Convention, which meets in Boston today.

Mr. Bird was on the other end of the telephone.

The members of the Committee on Resolutions, placed on the platform by Mr. Crane and obeying the orders of Mr. Crane on the other, nervously awaited Mr. Bird's report.

"There are interests in the Republican party," they knew, "that are prejudiced against the eight-hour day."

The instance, was the message Mr. McCall delivered to Mr. Bird.

Upon his demand for the identity of the "interests," Mr. Bird was informed that Mr. Crane would not stand for the eight-hour day.

KEEPING IT DARK.

The Committee on Resolutions shortly adjourned. Mr. McCall announced that the committee was pledged to secrecy. It is the purpose of the Republican leaders to keep the platform a secret until the hour of the convention.

"We don't want the up-State delegates to read it in the papers on the way down to the morning and come here prepared to fight," was the reason assigned by a Republican prominent in the leadership of the party.

A secret conference between Mr. Bird and Mr. McCall late last night was preceded with the same deep secrecy that marked the secret conference between Mr. McCall and Mr. Crane today at Mr. Bird's office, No. 27 State street.

As late as 11 o'clock last night, Mr. Bird was advised of the proceedings in the Committee on Resolutions by Charles E. Burbank, a former Progressive member of the State and in the Republican fold and was rewarded with an appointment to the Committee on Resolutions.

Mr. Burbank and Mr. McCall were both in evening dress when they left the Walpole millionaire. Both sat in with the Platform Committee and communicated with Mr. Bird by phone.

Mr. Bird learned that some of his Progressive suggestions had encountered the opposition of the "interests" in the party.

He learned that a majority of the Committee on Resolutions stood with him for a short ballot, so-called, under which the people would elect only a Governor, who would be empowered to appoint the other State officials, including the Attorney-General, the last officer of the State but that certain "interests" demanded that this power be concentrated in the Governor by public legislation.

"They want to concentrate the power, but they want a definite law provided for that purpose," was said, in substance, to be the attitude of the "interests" reported to Mr. Bird.

Mr. Bird was informed that the committee would give him a constitutional convention.

He was given that the budget system would be adopted.

But he also learned that the committee would adopt a plank for a national system of employment supervision.

But he also learned that anything that savored of an eight-hour day would not be tolerated by the "interests."

CON-CON!

Ringmaster Crane stood at the entrance to the Big Top this morning. Barmun used to be in the same business.

"We please everybody," said the Ringmaster, snapping long whip, Hoop la!

A Boy from Walpole was dragged under the tent by somebody within.

The Boy lost some of his proudest possessions. We picked them up and looked them over. They were marked Government Ownership of Public Utilities, Equal Suffrage, and Initiative and Referendum.

"Hey Boy," we cried, "you've lost something!"

"You may have them," he called back, "they are going to let me ride the elephant. I won't want those things any more. I came as far as this on THEM."

"YOUR elephant," we heard a voice within say, "is Constitutional Convention. He's an amusing cuss. He'll do anything the Ringmaster tells him to."

"My," said the Boy, "but hasn't he got a long name!"

"Don't let that bother you," said the voice, "you can call him by his PET name like we do. His pet name is 'Con-Con.'"

And by the way, Lord Gumbygoo, didst hear what they did to Prohibition last night at the Copley-Plaza?

I did not, milord, but I seen it; I was in the bar all the evening.

DETECTIVES IN SEARCH FOR FIREBUG

Five boys were found in the cellar of the unfinished three-decker at No. 128 Homes avenue, Dorchester, which with five other dwellings were destroyed by fire last Monday morning, according to Jeremiah J. Donovan, watchman of the building.

Donovan placed the time of the visit of the boys, who, ranged in years from fifteen to seventeen, as the Saturday before the fire. The boys were strangers in the district. Whether any of these boys set fire to the building Donovan cannot say. He is of the opinion that their presence in the building was for no good purpose.

Daniel MacLean, the contractor for whom the three-decker was being built, comes out with the statement that the "fire was set." He says the story that the fire started from water coming in contact with barrels of lime is absurd.

The police are leaving no stone unturned in investigating the cause of the fire and, others in the district. Two men from the office of the State police are assisting in the work, which is being superintended by Captain Reardon of the Adams street station.

Great praise is being bestowed in all parts of Dorchester for the AMERICAN in its efforts to unearth the firebug, who may have been responsible for the epidemic of fires which have infested the district the past fortnight.

Dr. Joseph E. Ingoldsby of No. 419 Blue Hill avenue, who has a number of patients in the vicinity of Homes avenue and Hamilton street, is loud in his praise of the AMERICAN. He says the reward of $100 offered by the AMERICAN, with a like amount promised by Mayor Curley for the capture and conviction of the pyromaniac, had greatly appeased the minds of property owners and residents.

Residents near the scene of the fire say that it is a custom of men and boys to enter unfinished buildings to smoke. They say this is especially true of some men whose business keeps them on the street during the early morning hours.

Many detectives are scouring Dorchester for trace of such persons and a possible firebug to earn the AMERICAN'S $100 reward and Mayor Curley's contribution of another $100. Men, women and children on Homes avenue were quizzed as to their knowledge of boys in the district who had a penchant for seeing the new motor apparatus in action at fires.

"Jere" Donovan was found by a reporter for the AMERICAN clearing away some of the debris from one of the burned houses and said:

"I was employed as watchman by MacLean to keep children out of the building and see that the lumber was not lighted and put in front of the new building each evening. I live in the rear of No. 153 Homes avenue, just across the street almost from the burned building.

"I hung out two lanterns in front of the building the night before the morning of the fire and stayed there till 6 p. m. I went to bed at 7:30 p. m. I was awakened by some sort of a noise in the street. I looked out and saw the fire.

"Charley Shepard, for whom I work, called for me to get up and look after the horses, as the stable was in danger. I got up and took out six horses.

"No one can tell how the fire started. That is impossible. Mr. Bird on Carona street. That fire is a mystery.

"The Saturday before the fire I saw six boys in the cellar of the house. They were strangers to me. I never saw them before. I was sweeping off the sidewalk at the time. I heard them making noise in the cellar.

"I put my head in the cellar window and said: 'Hello, boys.' One replied: 'Hello, mister.' They were picking wood. 'They had a pile of it.'"

Figures Reveal Crime on Increase

Crime is on the increase, according to the report of Fred C. Ingalls, clerk of the Municipal Criminal Court, for the year ending Saturday.

While there is a total of 902 cases more than last year, there is a decrease of 668 arrests for drunkenness. There were 29 more prosecutions for violations of the motor laws. The unemployment of many men last Winter caused the increase in thefts, there being 68 more arrests for robbery. There were 11 persons arrested for murder. Thirty-six arrests were made for violation of the Sullivan law and for obstructing fire-escapes. 41 prosecutions were made.

Scotland Visited by an Earthquake

By International News Service.

LONDON, Oct. 2—A violent earthquake shock was felt today in Dumfrieshire, Scotland. The earth tremors began at 2:25 o'clock and lasted several seconds. It is reported that the damage was not serious.

First Woman as Health Inspector

The first woman medical inspector to be appointed to the Health Department is Dr. Laura A. C. Hughes of No. 98 Huntington avenue, Back Bay. She was appointed by Mrs. Frances N. Mahoney, health commissioner, at a salary of $1200 a year. The appointment has been approved by Mayor Curley.

Dorchester Flower Day Off a Week

Flower Day in Dorchester, which was to have been today, was postponed until next Saturday because of the rain. A large number of little boys and girls went to the Dorchester Settlement House to get a supply of flowers to sell and were much disappointed.

$200 REWARD

The AMERICAN will pay $100 for information furnished to the AMERICAN which will result in the arrest and conviction of the so-called Dorchester "firebug."

Mayor Curley cut of his own pocket also offers a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the "firebug."

This person is believed already to have set nine fires in Dorchester within six months, two of which resulted in the destruction of thousands of dollars' worth of property in the past three weeks.

Persons who have information should communicate at once with the City Editor of the AMERICAN (Telephone Main 5180). All information will be held in the strictest confidence.

marked progress on the heights of La Folie in trench to trench fighting.

In Champagne the Germans during the night made a hundred new lines near L'Epine de Vedegrange and to the east of the Navarin farm.

Our troops captured an important part of the enemy's position which formed a salient projecting from his front to the north of Mesnil.

"In Lorraine, German reconnoitring parties attacked two of our outposts near Moncel and Sorneville. They were repulsed and pursued as far as their own lines.

"On the balance of the front the night was calm.

"Our aeroplane squadrons dropped a great number of bombs on the railway stations and lines to the rear of the enemy's front, notably at the railway junction of Gajncicourt.

"At Amiftontaine our aviators shelled effectively the German during the night."

Guignicourt is just north of the Aisne river and lies upon one of the lines of communication supplying the German army in Champagne.

More than three million shells have been hurled by the allies in the past week.

AVIATORS ACTIVE.

French and British aviators have damaged many of the railways behind the German lines and the Teutonic army is being kept busy by fresh troops and munitions to the front.

Verdun has been shelled by the Germans, who used a gun with a range of twenty-three miles to carry on the bombardment.

In the Champagne, where the Germans are striving desperately to hold the Rheims-Somme-Py bird way, the Teutonic artillery is using a new kind of gas which blinds the French soldiers with its fumes when it explodes.

It is admitted officially that the Germans were able to regain part of their lost trenches from the British overthrust of Saturday, but the allies have again launched such a violent series of assaults that the losses of the German troops holding the La Folie positions are in danger of being surrounded and cut off.

LOSSES OF FRENCH TROOPS DECLARED TO BE ENORMOUS

BERLIN, (By Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.), Oct. 2—"The largest and most fearful battle yet fought on the western front," is the description of the fighting in the Champagne region by a party of neutral war correspondents, who were invited to the firing line by the German general staff.

"The most fighting centred north of Massiges, where the French greatly overmatched the Germans.

According to the correspondents who secured their information from soldiers who actually took part in the battle, the French losses were enormous. One described them as "most terrific," another as "unheard of."

Part of the correspondents' time was occupied during a lull in the fighting and French prisoners were also interviewed.

It is declared by the correspondents that despite the artillery preparations that extended over several days, and the violence of the French assaults, the attacking forces failed to attain their object. General Joffre had evidently planned to cut off the German army in Champagne, but in this he was unsuccessful, the correspondents, who are from South American, Roumania and Holland, have left Champagne for other parts of the front.

REPORT BULGARS MOVING ON SERBIA

PARIS, Oct. 2.—It is reported from Athens that Bulgarian troops from Sofia are moving in the direction of the Serbian frontier, and that other forces are being dispatched toward the Greek border.

This information was forwarded today by the Athens correspondent of the Havas News Agency, who asserts it was obtained from a reliable source.

It is believed the principal point of concentration will be along the upper Strouma River, southwest of Sofia, near the Serbian border.

By PERCY THOMAS,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—All hope of preventing Bulgaria from going to war on the side of the Teutonic allies is rapidly being abandoned in official circles.

The entente powers are expected to send an ultimatum to Sofia within forty-eight hours, demanding an open declaration of Bulgaria's intentions.

A despatch from Bucharest states that Germany is sending troops to Bulgaria to reinforce King Ferdinand's army. German and Austrian officers are being scattered throughout the Bulgarian army.

The Balkan situation has not been so grave since the war began. Preparations have all been made to put an Anglo-French army, heavily supported by artillery, in Servia to oppose an advance of the Austro-German and Bulgarian forces toward the interior.

WAIT CONFLAGRATION.

Following the statement in Parliament by the British Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey, that Germany is taking the same steps to force Bulgaria into the war as were used in the case of Turkey, the belief has become general that it is only a matter of time until the conflagration of war sweeps over the Balkans. Although the intentions of Roumania are not known definitely, it is confidently expected that Greece will side with Servia.

A general attack against Servia by Austro-German and Bulgar forces would probably result in simultaneous attacks from three quarters—on the Drina River, on the Danube east of Belgrade, and on the Bulgar-Serb frontier near Cheglavatus. Cheglavatus, 6 m. on the railway coming from Sofia to Nish, the Servian capital, and is only 45 miles from Nish.

BRITISH AT BELGRADE.

There is already a strong force of British marines supported by heavy naval guns at Belgrade.

A telegram from Amsterdam by way of Paris, states that Germans are replacing Austrian troops on the first line on the Danube River front. A German Submarine which tried to pass through Semendrin on its way to Bulgaria, was sunk by Serbian artillery.

VICTORY CLAIMED BY TURKS IN GUN DUEL WITH ALLIES

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin, (by wireless), Oct. 2—Turkish artillery has successfully responded to the allies in a big gun duel on the Dardanelles front, according to an official statement issued here today:

"On Friday, the enemy vainly bombarded our position on the Anafarta front. We successfully silenced the enemy's mortars and destroyed machine gun positions.

"On the Tuk front, in the Persian Gulf sphere, we surprised British forces that had landed under the protection of gunboats north of Karna. The enemy suffered severely. Throughout Wednesday we shelled fresh British troops, four times our strength, which attacked us."

Bring Fragments of Metal on Hesperian

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The fragments of metal found on the Hesperian after it either was torpedoed or struck a mine reached the State Department this afternoon, with the stories of its officers, who swore that the ship was torpedoed. The fragments of metal were sent at once to the Navy Department, where experts will try to determine whether they are from a mine or a torpedo.

"WE'RE SERVING HUMANITY" SAY SISTERS OF ST. MARY

"When We Tell Others of the Value of Father John's Medicine As a Tonic and Body Builder and for Colds."

The Sisters of St. Mary, of Mason, Que., Canada, in a recent letter, say: "We will willingly permit you to make use of our testimonial in favor of Father John's Medicine. We consider that by doing so we are rendering a great service to humanity at large, but especially to people of limited means, who are desirous of having a quick, sure and comparatively inexpensive restorer of health. They have all this in Father John's Medicine. For several years and with best results we have been using your medicine in our community. We have already recommended it to several young ladies, teachers, who say that from the very first bottle they used they have felt its beneficial effects, and as soon as they begin to feel tired at the first approach of the class room, a bottle of Father John's Medicine gives them new vigor. It prevents colds or we find Father John's Medicine a safe and prompt remedy.

"Hoping that these few details of our own experience in the use of the medicine may be useful to you, we remain, Very respectfully, (Signed) Sisters of St. Mary."

Because it contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine for children as well as older people. It is a doctor's prescription, more than fifty years in use. It heals throat and lungs, and by means of its pure food elements nourishes and builds up those who are weak and run down.

SPANGO'S

An Amazing Short Story of Love-Making and Adventure

By James Oppenheim

and distinct there, in the staff, at the edge of the road, stood the girl—a wild young figure, rooted, and yet seeming winged and flying. She figures in the story.

MRS. POLLY, the detective, was in no mood for long making. She knew she was out on a difficult job, and that she needed all her wits. All she could say to herself was:

"Ah, it's a pity you didn't bring any brains with you."

Frank Chase, however, sitting beside her at the steering wheel of the big touring car, had only Polly on his mind. He admired her immensely, though he had known her for exactly two days: he admired her mature stoutness, her clear, penetrating blue eyes, her high-piled blond hair, her crude, handsome features, her way of talking, her gestures; item by item, everything.

So he took the marvelous road easily, following the far-spaced lamps: and though he was a chauffeur, he felt the pride of taking out a real lady in his car. It happened that his employer, Larkin, the gambler, was down in Panama; and so, in fact, the car as good as belonged to Frank.

The night was cloudy and a little cold. They left, rather than ran, the Westchester Hills; now a fringe of woods gleamed faintly beside them; now there was a spot of warm light in some half-hidden cottage. It was nearly 10 o'clock. "I'm late," thought Mrs. Polly. But then it had been necessary to "help" Frank get through a big supper.

"Too chilly" she thought too. She was shivering. She longed at last for the danger already: the fierce heat, warmth, the roaring open fireplace, the crowd.

Frank slowed down the car.

"Say," he burst out, "you've got me Polly!"

"What's that?" she exclaimed, startled."

"You're a regular lady, Kirah Polly, and not one of these kids."

"I should say I'm not a kid," she said sharply.

She seized his arm and shook it.

"What's that for?" he asked.

"To make him pay attention and get out of you, put on a little speed, and behave yourself, Frank."

A lamp they passed gave the angular and pleasing outlines of his gray-eyed face.

"Ki," he said earnestly, "you think I don't mean it."

"If you do," she replied, "you're a young fool. I'm fifteen years older than you, with a husband and a darling flat. I'm not eligible."

"Ah, Ki, now," he began, and tried to take her hand. She withdrew it, with an impulse to call him Frank instead, she spoke sharply and quickly:

"Here, no antics!"

"What do you mean?" he snarled. He was charrined.

"I mean that you grab, and leave out the preliminaries. I'm afraid you've been training with a tough lot. But a real woman wants to be kissed, not sandbagged."

He studied the steering wheel, and let out the speed. The car leaped under them. Then he replied softly.

"Seeing I'm Polled, you win! But say," he went on, "why are you so nice to me then?"

"Why?" she spoke in a low uneven voice, charged with poignant emotion. "Why, I'm nice to you because you're you and I'm naturally a sentimental fool. I'm a fool, I tell you, all there is to it."

Frank kept his eyes straight ahead.

"So, son," said Mrs. Polly, "let's get to Spango's and have a light meal. I'm trusting you. I know you're straight as a string."

She lightly pressed his arm; and a pleasant silence was established between them.

Frank imparted to him the necessary fiction that she was bound for Spango's Conditorei because she had heard that her husband, who had deserted her, was to be found sitting at notorious resort. The fact was, however, that a certain rich young New Yorker had complained to headquarters that his wife had been seduced by Spango. He had come to the roadhouse somewhat inebriated, and awakened in the morning minus his bank-roll and money. Mrs. Polly was put under the man's direction to find out who it was there to be done. The young man was turned over to Mrs. Polly; but he knew little. Yes, he had seen at Spango's a fair-haired lampe; and though he was a chauffeur, he felt the pride of taking out a real lady in his car. He supposed that his employer, Larkin, the gambler, was down in Panama; and so, in fact, the car as good as belonged to Frank.

The night was cloudy and a little cold. ABERDEENS TO BE GUESTS IN BOSTON

On board the American liner New York, bound for America, are the Marquis and Marchioness of Aberdeen, lately Viceroy and Viceress of Ireland. At one time the Marquis was Governor General of Canada.

They come to America to attend meetings and to lecture on social subjects. They plan to visit Boston, among other cities. The Marchioness is president of the International Council of Women.

The couple, on whom two kings of England have lavished honors, will go first to the annual meeting of the National Council of Women to be held in Toronto this month.

They have agreed to address meetings in several cities in the United States on the social movements in Ireland. Lord Aberdeen has been twice Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and his long residence in Dublin has made him and the Marchioness thoroughly familiar with social conditions there.

Next week they will be the guests of several hundred Bostonians.

Chairman P. A. O'Connell of the general committee announces that Joseph A. Dennison, John Nolan and James W. Reardon had been assigned to act for the Bostonian reception committee in New York. These men have received special permission to board the New York in the harbor from the United States revenue cutter and escort the visitors through the city.

It is expected that they will arrive in Boston some time Saturday morning and will occupy a suite at the Copley-Plaza. October 11 is the day set for the reception to the visitors, when they will be the guests at a banquet at the Exchange Club.

The executive committee planning the reception and banquet is composed of the following: Elbridge R. Anderson, Charles G. Bancroft, Jeremiah E. Burke, Frank W. Buxton, Timothy E. Byrnes, Louis A. Coolidge, Henry V. Cunningham, Charles A. DeCourcy, Joseph A. Dennison, Michael J. Dwyer, T. J. Falvey, Edward A. Filene, T. H. Fitzpatrick, C. O'Connell Galvin, T. W. Good, John C. Heyer, treasurer; J. W. Mansfield, J. C. McCormick, John R. Murphy, M. J. Murray, Thomas A. Mullen, Harry P. Nawn, John Nolan, P. A. O'Connell, Joseph H. O'Neil, John A. O'Shea, Joseph C. Pelletier, James J. Phelan, J. Reardon, Bernard J. Rothwell, A. Shuman, George L. Thatcham, Leslie C. Wead and Daniel G. Wing.

Lord Aberdeen received his new title of Marquis only last January. Before that the most imposing of his titles was Earl of Aberdeen. His family name is Gordon.

At first, after being raised to the rank of Marquis, he assumed the title Marquis of Tara, being at that time Viceroy of Ireland. Later, however, he dropped the "Marquis of Tara," when its assumption caused adverse criticism, and took the title Marquis of Ormai.

A few months ago he gave up the post in Ireland, being succeeded by Lord Wimborne, who led the polo team which carried back to England the International Cup last year.

Lady Aberdeen has long been a commanding figure in the social-official life of the British Empire. Her position as Viceress of Ireland and as the consort of the Governor General of Canada carried with it royal prerogatives.

FARRAR RIVALS WORLD STARS ON FILM

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The first thing that arrested your eyes when you entered the lobby of Symphony Hall last night was a solid breastwork of floral contributions, about five feet high and at least a hundred feet long. It looked like the masked batteries you read about in the war news. The impression was heightened by a steady click, click, click, like machine guns in action.

Investigation revealed that a whole division of telegraph operators were banging away, sending to a palpitating world the news of Geraldine Farrar's debut on the screen. They were located just forninst the cloakroom.

Inside the hall there was a multitude of people. Every seat appeared to be taken and there were lots of standees. On the platform was a huge orchestra sawing away at a descriptive composition, entitled "Europe at War," in which strains of "The Watch on the Rhine" predominated, but into which "The Star-Spangled Banner" entered, probably protesting against the submarine outrages.

About eight rows from the front Geraldine Farrar herself was seated, wearing a wonderful gown which began about two inches above her waist. All the folks in the vicinity twisted and squirmed to get a glimpse of her, and especially observed a new style of hair dressing she was wearing.

Presently the big, red velvet curtains parted and everybody settled back to see "Carmen" on the film. But, no, it was a cavalry drill at Fort Meyer, which was followed by pictures of chrysanthemums, orchids and primroses. Next we saw a lot of caterpillars turn into butterflies, had some excellent views of Niagara Falls and really wonderful sunsets in different places.

The "Carmen" picture occupies a little over an hour to perform. Hence the padding.

The film "Carmen" was produced by the Lasky Company. The scenario is by William C. De Mille, founded upon the story by Prosper Merimee. Miss Farrar played the title role; Wallace Reid, Don Jose; Horace Carpenter, Pastia, the tavern keeper; Pedro de Cordoba, Escamillo the Toreador.

Mr. De Mille's name deserves special mention because the "Carmen" he has turned out differs from Merimee's novel just as Bizet's opera differs from it, while its relation to the opera itself is very distant.

He has, in fact, created a new work upon the subject of "Carmen" and it has the merit of being a strong, very thrilling and captivating play. You needn't have ever heard of the book or the opera to follow every phase of this "Carmen."

The photography of this picture is simply marvelous. You are lost in admiration at the beauty of the rapidly passing scenes and the effective massing of lights, shades and what few color effects were at the disposal of the artists who made the film.

You are almost overwhelmed by the amassing power, passion, tenseness and realism of Miss Farrar's acting. Those who have considered her merely as a singing actress must admit that she needs no song to rival the greatest actresses of the speaking stage and the screen.

The Carmen which Mr. De Mille and Miss Farrar herself have evolved is not subtle, mysterious or enigmatical. The followers of motion pictures do not muse upon the inwardness of the characters in screen plays. They want their performers to wear labels. Miss Farrar's Carmen has a tag. It is plain "bad," without one redeeming feature. And how wicked she does make her! How realistic is her fiendishness! She hires out to seduce Don Jose from his duty and the moment she has done so she deserts him.

In the opera you will remember that Carmen indulged in a little stabbing affair off stage. There is no off stage for the film. We see the cigarette factory and the fight. Words can't describe what a wicked scrap it is. They say Miss Farrar's opponent was carried away on a stretcher when the scene was filmed out in Los Angeles. It's a wonder she ever recovered.

There is also a sword fight between Jose and Morales which is crammed with thrills, and there is a most impressive bull fight, of which we see glimpses, which alternate with the slow murder of Carmen by the vengeful Jose in the final moments.

The acting throughout is excellent. As the scenario does not follow the libretto of the opera at all, the task of shuffling the finest score, so that it should apply to the pictures on the screen, is a gigantic one, but it has been very well done. One feature of the De Mille Carmen is the discharging of Michaela, the good little girl who pursues Don Jose, accompanied by a sickly melody supposed to contrast her purity with the wickedness of Carmen. Of course the arranger, Mr. Rothapfel, does not use the Michaela motive. The orchestra is conducted very well by Hugh Ross-feld.

After the performance a party was given by Morris Gest in one of the cloakrooms, and there Miss Farrar was presented by the Lasky Company with a fur cloak valued at $10,000, which became her immensely when she tried it on. It was as a testimonial to Miss Farrar's generosity in furnishing all her own costumes for the picture.

? Why That Lame Back?

THAT morning lameness, those sharp stabs of pain when bending or lifting, the dull, throbbing backache that keeps up all day and hinders rest or sleep, are reasons enough to suspect kidney trouble. Don't waste time rubbing the back. Get after the cause. Help the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful for weak kidneys and for kidney backaches. And when the kidneys are better, the other annoying symptoms depart —the dizzy spells, all-tired feelings, nervousness, rheumatic pains, bladder troubles, etc. You don't have to take our word for it. All over the world grateful people frankly praise Doan's Kidney Pills. Plenty of cases right here in Greater Boston.

Here's What Boston People Say:

Tremont Street	W. Newton Street	Washington St. (Brookline)
W. S. Ripley, Sr., music teacher, 228 Tremont St., says: "I had a dull, tired ache in the small of my back. It hurt me to bend and I couldn't turn over in bed without sharp pains catching me in my back. Mornings I felt unrefreshed and without ambition. The kidney secretions contained sediment. I often became dizzy and my sight blurred. Doan's Kidney Pills freed me of the trouble."	Mrs. Alfred Barnes, 247 W. Newton St., says: "I had kidney complaint and suffered from backache. If I exerted myself, I felt weakness across my loins and had a tired, worn-out feeling. I also had trouble from the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills soon rid me of the trouble. I have been free from backache and all symptoms of kidney complaint since."	Thomas H. O'Neill, proprietor shoe repair shop, 100 Washington St., says: "I suffered from a constant, dull ache across the small of my back. I was subject to dizzy spells and seemed to see little specks in front of me. The kidney secretions were highly colored and contained sediment like brick-dust. They also burned in passage. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. The backache left, the kidney secretions cleared up, and I felt better in every way."
Wyman St. (Roxbury)	Saratoga St. (E. Boston)	E. Fifth St. (So. Boston)
Mrs. William Hughes, 93 Wyman St., says: "My doctor told me that my kidneys were in bad shape. I had a dull pain in the small of my back and was sore and stiff on getting up in the morning. Some days I didn't feel like doing any work at all, as I had no ambition or energy. At night my limbs cramped and I could hardly move. I used two or three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they brought me great relief."	George F. Pitts, 340 Saratoga St., says: "I suffered for quite a long time from my kidneys. My back was weak and I had sharp pains in my kidneys. I found it especially hard to do any bending or lifting. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage, highly colored and burned. One of my friends told me of Doan's Kidney Pills and one box helped me. I kept on taking them until cured and I have had little trouble since."	Mrs. Katie J. Harington, 665 E. Fifth St., says: "My back was so sore and stiff that I could hardly move. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. My head ached and I was often so dizzy that I almost toppled over. Six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

MISS COVINGTON DENOUNCES DR. HILL

By International News Service.

DETROIT, Oct. 2.—Miss Lucille Covington, thirty-five years old, pretty and defiant, arrived in Detroit this morning from Alpena, Mich., where she has been organizing for the Fraternal Order of Yeomen, and had many interesting things to say in connection with the $100,000 breach of promise suit filed in New York against Dr. John Wesley Hill of that city.

She declares that when the suit comes to trial she will give testimony calculated to convince a jury that she has been badly treated by Dr. Hill and that she will prove how clumsy that he has broken faith with her.

She denounced Dr. Hill roundly in an interview with Detroit newspapermen, and says she will fight the case to the end.

TELLS OF WOOING.

"With tears streaming down his face and standing in big, round drops in his eyes, he declared in heart-broken accents that his poor little wife was dead and that he needed her to make a home for his poor little motherless children. The old hypocrite! He had rather tell a lie than tell the truth any time," said Miss Covington.

After days of silence and denial Miss Covington today opened her heart and told her story of the romance between herself and the celebrated minister and lecturer that has led to the courts.

She is a beautiful woman, petite, with a rare form, very large, expressive eyes and a great wealth of black hair.

ELOQUENT IN PLEADING.

"I first met Dr. Hill five years ago," she said. "Almost at once, his proposals of marriage began, it may be an old story with men like him. I have heard it was, but the story to me was new. I did not know he was married, although I knew he had been married. He told me his wife was dead. Ah, how his voice throbbed as he described the condition of his poor little motherless children. 'I need you' he said. 'A man in my position, in public life, travelling about the country needs a wife to make a home for his little brood. You are so sympathetic and I admire you so for your sound sense, your beauty, your warm heart and splendid soul.'

"That is the way he talked to me.

"I was not in his employ. He came to our company to get inspiration for his lectures. He paid me every attention from the start. His love seemed to spring into quick being. I cannot tell you all that happened. That will all come out at the trial. He is such an old hypocrite and liar. I believed him, though; I thought him a man of sterling worth and great character. He is just like a great many others I know.

"He would stand at my side with his voice trembling, tears in his eyes and hands held out. He would dwell on his loneliness, his need of companionship, his starved heart, and then swing into a beautiful oratorical outburst of love.

"It makes me angry and indignant the way Bainbridge Colby talks and the statements he makes. He knows nothing whatever about the case except what Dr. Hill tells him and the Lord knows no one can depend on that sort of information. His son is another 'poor lamb.' He is older now, but he had better keep still. He flung around Columbia College and could not pass examinations until Hill got busy and used his influence and then he tried for five years to get admitted to the bar and he could not until more political influence was brought to bear.

"Those people that are talking for Dr. Hill don't know anything. When I get on the stand in New York some things will come out that will show how exactly right I am."

Eugenia Kelly, whose mother, sued by Al Davis for $50,000 on allegation of slander, declares she will ask court to appoint a guardian for her daughter.

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Coincident with the filing of a $50,000 suit by Al Davis, the dancer, against Mrs. Edward Kelly, for alleged slander, she announces she will ask the court to appoint a guardian for her daughter, Miss Eugenia Kelly, because of her insistence upon continuing friendship with Davis.

Mrs. Kelly caused the arrest of her daughter last May for incorrigibility and it was charged at the time that the young woman was being unduly influenced by Davis, solely because of the fact that Miss Kelly was worth $1,000,000 in her own right.

Within the next few days the courts will be asked to appoint a guardian to tie up and conserve the Flowbyer estate. Miss Kelly inherits the vast estate when she becomes twenty-one, which will be within the next few months.

Several days ago Davis began the preparation of his suit for slander. His attorney completed and served the summons. This simply set forth that the suit had been brought. It does not say upon what grounds.

A process server went to Mrs. Kelly's home and asked for her. He said he wanted to give her some information. Mrs. Kelly replied that he could see her attorney, John F. McIntyre.

"But it's information about Al Davis," said the process man, knowing Mrs. Kelly's attitude toward him.

"Come right up," said Mrs. Kelly. When the process-server went up he handed her the papers and left her storming.

Harvard 'Coop' Plans to Favor Cash Customers

Cash customers are to receive preference over "charge it" students when the annual sale of the Harvard Co-operative Society is out in the shape of dividends.

The Coop" is devoted to supplying Harvard men, graduates and students, with every furnishing.

The cost of carrying extra help to keep the charge book of the society evidently gave the board of directors an idea of the real value between cash and credit purchasers, for they have voted as follows:

"There will be a difference in the rate of dividend upon cash purchases which are to be made after July 1, 1915. This difference in rate will not exceed 5 per cent, and it will be in favor of cash purchases."

Dr. Gray Named for Ellsworth's Place

Dr. Hugh Barr Gray of College Point, N. Y., graduate of Harvard Medical School, has been chosen superintendent and physician for the Washingtonian Home, No. 41 Waltham street, South End. He fills the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. W. A. Ellsworth. Dr. Gray has just assumed his new duties. For fifteen years he has been in general practice, with much hospital work.

GIRL MISSING IN LYNN AFTER DEATH TRY

told her sisters she had wandered around Sluice Pond, vainly trying to get up her courage to drown herself.

Last Tuesday she was found unconscious from gas poisoning. The sisters believed that accidental, but now think it was a suicidal effort.

She was revived at the Lynn Hospital Thursday. Now she is missing again. It is feared that she has succeeded this time in making way with herself.

CAME FROM ENGLAND.

Miss Broughton came to Lynn six months ago from her girlhood home in England. She was melancholy on account of ill health. She is twenty-nine and worked at times for the General Electric Company.

The latest absence of Miss Edith was reported to the police today by Miss Elsie Broughton, a sister with whom she shared lodgings at No. 8 Congress street, Lynn, and by a married sister, Mrs. O. H. Clemens of No. 18 Holland avenue.

Mis Elsie Broughton said later:

"A month ago we first became aware of the serious condition of Edith's nerves, when she tried to commit suicide.

"About a week later she left the house at noon and was away all the afternoon and night. The next morning she returned, saying: 'I spent the night on the shore of Sluice Pond. I wish I had had the courage to jump in.'

THOUGHT ACCIDENTAL.

"Last Tuesday my other sister, Mrs. Clement, found Edith unconscious from gas on the bath room floor at her home on Holland avenue. We thought at first it was accidental, but since then we are convinced that Edith did it deliberately. She was sent to Lynn Hospital, was revived and was allowed to go home Thursday, when I was at work.

"I think she came back to our place for a ring that our mother had and which Edith used to wear, is gone. I think the ring was there while she was at the hospital, so I think she must have been at our room some time Thursday. But we have not seen her since she left the hospital, and we have asked the police to drag Sluice Pond."

Fifty Boy Scouts under G. E. McGhee from the Washington Street Baptist Church searched about Sluice Pond. One hundred more Boy Scouts started to search Lynn Woods around Hawkes, Walden and Pilling's ponds.

Has Device to Circle Globe by Wireless

Struck by Two Automobiles, Skull Fractured

An automobile struck Hyman Bornstein while he was chasing his wind-blown hat across Blue Hill avenue in Dorchester, and tossed him in front of a second car running in the other direction. His skull was fractured.

Bornstein's home is at No. 26 Fowler street. He went to Blue Hill avenue for a trolley ride. He was first struck by an auto owned and driven by Walter J. Morton of No. 75 Morton street, Forest Hills. There were six others in the car. Morton tried desperately to avoid Bornstein, but his machine skidded on the wet roadway just enough to hit Bornstein with a mud-guard.

Bornstein was thrown in front of an auto owned by Vernon Backow of No. 86 South Central street, Wellaston, and driven by Sherman Backow of the same address.

The second car threw Bornstein violently to one side. He was taken into a store and thence to the City Hospital.

Woman, Holding Bible, Dies in Charles

A woman, with a Bible clasped to her breast, ended her life by drowning herself in the Charles River Basin early today. The body, with the Bible floating near by, was recovered from the water near the Boston end of the Harvard bridge by Patrolman Dyer of the Metropolitan Park Police.

The woman, about thirty-five years old, and colored, was seen from a distance by a woman spectator, who gave an alarm. But there was not time enough to prevent the suicide.

The colored woman deliberately walked off the esplanade platform, below the Boston end of the bridge, struggled in the water a moment and went under.

The body, with the water-soaked Bible, was taken to the Metropolitan Park Police Station at the lower end of the basin.

Packers Seek U. S. Aid in Meat Cases

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The Chicago packers, through their attorneys, Henry Veeder and C. J. Faulkner, today appealed to the State Department to make representations to the British government to take their cases, whereby $12,500,000 worth of meat cargoes were confiscated, out of the jurisdiction of the prize court.

Acting Secretary of State Polk and Assistant Counselor Anderson listened to their pleas, but gave them no answer. Mr. Polk said he would take their request under consideration.

BATTLESHIP MAY BE BUILT AT NAVY YARD

Assistant Secretary Franklin D. Roosevelt of the Navy Department hinted at the Charlestown Navy Yard, in praising the progress of work on the supply ship soon to be being built there at a contract figure of about $1,171,000, that even larger vessels, possibly a battleship, may be entrusted to this yard some time by the government.

The supply ship is the biggest vessel which the Charlestown yard has ever undertaken to construct. New building ways had to be laid for the job.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed complete satisfaction with both progress and character of the work so far. The cost, to this point, has been kept below the contract figure for this stage.

Mr. Roosevelt told the heads of various yard departments that the Navy Department was pleased with work on the supply ship. With this demonstration of what the Charlestown yard can do there in a good chance, he declared, that even larger ways will be built there some time, possibly large enough to allow the yard to figure on battleship construction.

The Assistant Secretary was making his usual Fall inspection of the yard. Escorted by Commandant Rush, with departments heads accompanying, Mr. Roosevelt inspected shop and yard work. He met several of the skilled workmen, with whom he chatted informally about working conditions, inviting and receiving suggestions about the work.

Harvard Doctor Tells His Experiences in a War Hospital at the Front

Dr. Porter, just back after working behind the firing line in Europe with the Harvard Hospital Corps, discusses his experiences and observations with Mr. Julian Hawthorne. He tells of the thrilling times when the wounded are brought in and how modern surgery saves lives of men when it would seem all hope must be given up.

LOAN TAKEN UP IN THREE DAYS, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—"The loan has practically all been taken," was the unofficial but authoritative statement received today.

The subscription list for the $500,000,000 Anglo-French five-year 5 per cent. loan could have been closed by J. P. Morgan & Co. late yesterday. It was added, but the syndicate managers desired to give Western and Southern bankers ample opportunity to digest the terms before subscribing.

I am informed that the record subscription of $240,000,000 comes from General du Pont of the famous powder manufacturing family, whose profits from the war are expected to exceed $100,000,000. Efforts to gain information from the du Pont interests were not successful.

Individual subscriptions, as foretold here a week ago, have astonished the underwriters. All names, however, are being concealed by bankers.

Munition makers as a whole have agreed to take a very large part of the issue.

Dealings in the bonds—on the usual "when issued" basis—were begun in the Broad Street Curb Market at 3p and some $75,000 is was recorded changed hands between 97¾ and 98.

A compilation of subscriptions announced up to Thursday evening showed a total of $360,000,000.

Intimations were given by insiders that the whole $500,000,000 would be well over-subscribed. In this case, small subscribers will receive first consideration.

Let me add several exclusive statements which will greatly interest the whole financial community:

Their trustworthiness is beyond question. Every dollar's worth of war material delivered to Britain has been paid for. On contracts already placed, but not yet filled, 25 per cent. cash has been paid.

A large quantity of American securities has been corralled by the British, and these will be marketed so as to have the best possible effect upon foreign exchange.

Munitions bills to date have been paid by means of sales of American securities and gold shipments. America's total imports of gold since January 1 have exceeded $250,000,000, Washington announced yesterday.

Report Improvement in Boston Business

Business continues to improve in the report of the Boston Free Employment Office for the month of September, although it is still far from normal. The demand for help from employers from all sources have an increase of 35 per cent. over the previous month and 25 per cent. over September of last year. The number of positions reported filled during the last month shows an increase of 29 per cent. over the previous month and an increase of 25 per cent. over September, 1914.

$2,000,000 Estate Left by Spaulding

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 2.—John W. Carrigan, State inheritance tax attorney, announces that he has completed a survey of the estate left by the late A. G. Spaulding, sporting goods manufacturer, and found that the value was in excess of $1,000,000 instead of $600,000, the value placed upon it by Mr. Spaulding before his death. "It may go as high as $2,000,000," says Carrigan.

100 SUBMARINES 4 BATTLESHIPS, NAVY PLAN

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The first of the series of conferences on national defence which are expected to revolutionize the military policy of the United States will be held at the White House, Wednesday, when the need of a stronger navy will be considered.

This will be the opening discussion of this subject between President Wilson and Representative Padgett, chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs. It is considered of the greatest moment as in Mr. Padgett's committee must originate all measures for raising the increased revenues necessary for an enlarged building program.

FOUR BATTLESHIPS WANTED.

Participating in this conference will be Secretary Daniels and probably Rear Admiral Benson, chief of operations. Mr. Daniels declared today that he has not yet settled upon the program which ultimately he will ask Mr. Wilson to approve. It is known, however, that a strong premium is being brought upon the Secretary by the naval general board, headed by Admiral Dewey, for four battleships.

From all sides the necessity for additional fast-going craft of the battle cruiser type is being urged. That there will be a great increase in submarines is forecasted everywhere in naval circles.

When Secretary Daniels faced a crowd of 150 persons the other day at the opening of submarine bids, where previously a dozen or so only had been in attendance, he observed:

"This is a sure indication that submarines are more popular than they used to be."

SUBMARINES AND AIR CRAFT.

Some close observers predict that the new program will call for 100 submarines, about 25 more than now are in commission.

A liberal allowance for air craft will be sought. The last Congress blazed the way for the development of an air fleet by appropriating $1,000,000. It is likely that the forthcoming program will call for the expenditure of four or five times that amount. As to increase in personnel, it is thought that about 10,000 additional men will be sought, of whom 2,000 will be given to the marine corps.

President Wilson will soon hold a similar conference with Secretary Garrison and Chairman Hay of the House Military Affairs Committee, when the needs of the new army will be given consideration.

Mrs. Wilcox to Hold Reception Today

Ella Wheeler Wilcox will hold a reception on the stage of the Toy Theatre after today's performance of "The Victory." It is expected that the many admirers of this gifted writer will take advantage of this opportunity of publicly testifying their appreciation and affection. Mr. Foote, the noted composer, will also be present at the matinee. His stirring musical number, descriptive of the triumph of Faith and written especially for this play, will be rendered by the quintet of artistic instrumentalists, under the direction of Clara Tippett.

McMasters Will Answer Col. Irish

At the non-partisan Suffrage rally to be held in the Municipal Building, Codman square, Dorchester, this evening, William H. McMasters will answer the attack of Colonel Irish upon Miss Minnie Muiry, as outlined in the morning papers. Other speakers will be Mrs. Ralph McDaniels of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, Charles T. Harding of Dorchester, and candidates of all parties for House and Senate from Wards 16, 20 and 24. Doors open at 7.30.

Harvard Man to Coach Yale Singers

Yale has drawn on Harvard for a coach for her singers. Francis S. Rogers of New York, a Harvard alumnus, has been appointed singing instructor in the Yale School of Music. Harvard Will Have Professional Coach

Harvard will have a professional coach next Spring and several men are now being considered for the position, including Christy Mathewson, the New York Giant pitcher; Arthur Irwin, who scouted for many years for the Yankees and was coach at Pennsylvania; Bill Sweeney, the ex-Brave, and Jack Carney, coach of Exeter.

It will be some time before the man will be decided upon, but it is known the Cambridge authorities are very much interested in Mathewson, who, a few years ago, coached the pitchers in the cage during the Winter months.

BOXING RESULTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—Results of last night's boxing: Abe Friedman outpointed Jack Sayles at the Long Acre A. C.; John (Kid) Albert defeated Paul Doyle at the Vanderbilt A. C.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—The ten-round bout between Jack Dillon and Jim Savage, scheduled for Polo's Field last night, was postponed on account of the rain until Tuesday night and will be held at the Broadway Sporting Club.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—Benny Leonard, Billy Wilson's lightweight, easily outfought Al Thomas of England in their 10-round bout at the American Sporting Club.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2—Tommy Howell went down to defeat at the hands of Willie Moore.

NEW BRITAIN, Ct., Oct. 2—The bout between Eddie Ridge and Paul Edwards was stopped in the fifth round last night, referee Jack Warner declaring Edwards unable to continue.

Everett Should Score Big.

Everett High will have the Mechanic Arts eleven at its opponents this afternoon at Everett and Cleo O'Donnell's charges are expected to pile up a big score.

MATTY SAYS ALEX IS ABLE TO PITCH THREE SERIES' GAMES

By DAMON RUNYON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Chris Mathewson told us a few things the other day about the business of pitching in the baseball in a World's Series pastime.

To hear the Old Master tell it, as he leaned carelessly against the concrete barrier at the press box gate, flicking the perspiration from his face with an ancient, tobacco-stained pitching glove, there is nothing easier. You step to the mound, toe on box and fling the pellet at the batsman—so!

At least, that's what one gathered from the calm, dispassionate manner in which Chris Mathewson discussed the proposition. And Chris ought to know, inasmuch as his favorite Fall-time diversion used to be World's Series encounters.

"Strain? What strain?" asked Chris, when we mumbled an interrogation as to what he thought of the ability of G. Cleveland Alexander to stand the strain of three games against the Red Sox. "Strain? Oh, yes! Strain! Why, he ought to pitch three games, if necessary, without any particular strain.

ALEX GOOD FOR THREE GAMES.

"Maybe they won't have to call on him for three games, and maybe it won't be advisable to call on him for more than one after his first appearance, but if he should be used three times Alex ought to go through without any difficulty. If they should start the series on a Saturday, and he should win, Alex could return Monday easily enough, then jump in again, say, Wednesday."

"Did you notice any particular strain in 1905 when you pitched those three games against the Athletics?" we asked.

"No," said Chris, "not after I got over the mental flurry just before the opener. I was somewhat disturbed in my mind because it was my first World's Series, but after the first few innings I was not bothered and I gave the succeeding games little thought in advance.

"There was no particular mental strain on me during any of the games, because runners were not getting on the bases. They were shot out quick, and when few runners are getting aboard a pitcher does not have to worry. It is when the boys are reaching first base that the pitcher has cause for mental flustration."

NO STRAIN FOR YOUTH.

"What about the physical strain?" we demanded.

"Physical!"

The shadow of a smile swept across the sombre features of the Old Master.

"Why," he said, "I was a young fellow then. Physical strain, your grandmother! Twenty-five years old and feeling a physical strain! I never thought of such a thing. In those days I thought I could pitch from noon until night and never feel any particular strain.

"Alexander is only a little older now than I was then, and he is fully as strong as I was. Moreover, he is in the very flower of usefulness; he is pitching the best ball of his career right now. It is six first World's Series, and he ought to have all the early enthusiasm that fires a fellow under such circumstances. That's why I say I think he can pitch three games without difficulty.

"He is a grand pitcher, Alexander," mused Matty. "Almost as good as I've ever seen. I don't think there's the slightest doubt of him meeting the big test successfully. I only hope Phils can get him a few runs early in that first game.

BOSTON PITCHERS ARE STARS.

"The Red Sox must have a good crew of pitchers. I've been watching their scores, and I notice that the opposition makes few hits off Carrigan's pitchers, and a pitcher has to be pretty good to be constantly keeping the base hits down.

"In my first World's Series game I depended largely on my fast ball. I had a good one then, I'm told. After that I used plenty of curves. Alexander is a great fast-ball pitcher, but then he has an unusually good assortment of curves. He has that old round-house boy, and then he has another wrinkle that breaks very sharp. He pitches with good control and with excellent judgment, and if the Red Sox let him they'll beat a real pitcher.

"The Sox have a batch of dangerous left-handed batters, and Alex is pretty effective against left-handers. His game in Boston Wednesday, when he carried his club through to the pennant, shows that he is in wonderful physical condition and that he has suffered no loss of effectiveness during the last stages of the campaign."

We were still intent on that strain thing however. We insisted on a strain somewhere in the story.

INSISTS ON STRAIN SOMEWHERE.

"Isn't it a good deal more of a strain on a fellow to pitch a World's Series game than to pitch an ordinary championship schedule game?" we demanded.

"Theoretically, yes; practically, no," said Matty. "At least there is really no more physical effort involved. However, a man always feels that so much more is expected of him in the World's Series games that he naturally works a bit short of strain.

"I've pitched harder games that attracted little attention than I ever did in a World's Series—at least, they seemed harder to me—but not so much depended on them, and so I escaped whatever mental tension there is connected with the big contests. But the physical effort was there, just the same."

"What is your opinion of the outcome of the series?" we said, to divert the conversation to another channel. And then we suddenly remembered that Matty is a baseball man's employe, and so we turned and walked away before he could divest himself of all his reply.

"Why, I think Moran's team has the best pitching," we heard Matty say. For we know all about those "I-thinks," as well ask Bill Carrigan for his views.

'Honey' Mellody Will Lose His Left Eye

"Honey" Mellody, former welterweight champion of the world, will undergo an operation by which he will lose his left eye today at the Carney Hospital in order to save the sight of his other eye. The news of this additional misfortune will undoubtedly stimulate the sale of tickets for the benefit which is to be tendered to Mechanics' Building on October 15, one of the gallant fighters who ever pulled on a glove.

PHAIR VIEWS ON SPORTS

THE ALIBI.

Roger Metcraw, manager of the Whaddnyacallems, is not downcast in the least over the loss of this year's pennant.

"It was simply a piece of strategy," he said. "I was trying out some recruits for next season's campaign.

"With my new material I cannot see how we can lose next year."

General IvanoBahvitch is not downcast in the least over the loss of Petrograd and Moscow.

"It was simply a piece of strategy," he said. "I was trying out some recruits for next season's campaign.

"With my new material I cannot see how we can lose next year."

Steve Smash, former middleweight champion, is not downcast in the least over the loss of his battle with Hugo Hitt.

"It is simply a piece of strategy," he said. "I was trying out a new punch for next year's campaign."

"With my new punch I cannot see how that guy can beat me again."

AN ESSAY.

This is an essay on nothing in particular. Anyhow it is an essay. If you don't believe it take a look at the caption up there on top. It stands in regular type: "An essay."

Having been cogitating on the rigors of football, we stepped into the elevator and spoke as follows: "Third floor, please."

The chauffeur, who appeared to be the only person in the elevator who understood the English language, stopped at the third floor and opened the gate. Then it commenced.

There were approximately six persons, aside from the chauffeur, in the elevator and each of them seemed to be invested in a discernible plot to prevent us from reaching that door.

While Heston once was a great line-backer, he was Hugo Hesdek. But you can't expect a common ordinary column conductor to act like a 42-centimeter shell.

We are now seated before our desk on the third floor, having escaped from the elevator. We have nothing against elevators, but why do all the wooden floors in the world congregate in them, planting themselves directly in front of the door?

Next time we seek one place of employment we are going to climb the stairs or else carry a limmy.

It is harder to get out of an elevator than it is to get out of Charles street.

It is agreed that Johnny Kilbane has plenty of class, but folks who saw him fight in Milwaukee say that he must have left it in a safety deposit vault.

The football expert is much like any other kind of expert. He is never accurate on the post-mortem than on the diagnosis.

As long as there are plenty of chauffeurs in our midst we are prepared for war. No invading army could cross Commonwealth avenue without stupendous losses.

Horse racing still is popular in Austria, but Russia has developed a leaning toward Marathon running.

Tip O'Neill refuses to lose his job as president of the Western League, showing that he is a game guy and a glutton for punishment.

"Living in flats," says a scientist, "causes insanity." Most football rooters evidently are flat dwellers.

Cincinnati proposes to teach baseball in its public schools. If you, friend reader, wanted your son to learn baseball, would you send him to Cincinnati?

PHILLIES GET OPENING OF BIG SERIES

of the American League, seconded the motion.

The commission then appointed as umpires Charles Rigler and William J. Klem of the Nationals and William Evans and Frank O'Loughlin of the American League.

The official scorer named was J. G. Taylor Spink of St. Louis. Two other scorers will be appointed, one of them a Boston man and the other from Philadelphia. These will be chosen by the Baseball Writers' Association of the respective cities.

The following eligible players—twenty-two for the Red Sox and twenty-three for Philadelphia—were announced by the National Commission:

RED SOX.

Catchers — Carrigan, Cady and Thomas.

Pitchers—Gregg, Collins, Foster, Leonard, Mays, Ruth, Shore and Wood.

Infielders—Barry, Gardner, Hoblitzell, Janvrin, McNally, Scott and Walker.

Outfielders — Henriksen, Hooper, Lewis and Speaker.

PHILADELPHIA.

Catchers—Adams, Burns, Killifer and Moran.

Pitchers—Alexander, Baumgartner, Chalmers, Demaree, Mayer, McQuillan, Rixey and Tincup.

Infielders—Bancroft, Byrne, Dugey, Luderus, Niehoff and Stock.

Outfielders—Becker, Cravath, Paskert, Whitted and Weiser.

Columbia and Yale Arrange Crew Race

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Yale and Columbia have agreed to row a dual race this year, according to an announcement by Coach Jim Rice of the Columbia crew.

The date and place is still to be settled, but it is expected the race will be held at New Haven, either on election day, November 2, or on Saturday, November 15. On the latter date the Yale-Princeton football game will be played at New Haven.

Columbia and Yale have not met in a varsity crew race in about twenty years and the revival of rowing relations will be received favorably by the alumni of both institutions. The freshmen oarsmen of both universities have competed in the Schuylkill regatta at Philadelphia on several occasions.

Holy Cross Battles West Point Today

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 2.—The Army eleven and Holy Cross clash here this afternoon and a tough battle is anticipated. The Worcester team wants to win badly. So do the cadets. The soldiers won last year, 14 to 0.

Holy Cross will have its full strength on the field. Mark Devlin will be at quarter, Albert Donnellan at halfback and John Hurley at fullback.

The Cadets are well prepared for the game and will use their best men and plays against the Massachusetts eleven.

Fordham Turns Down Many Star Athletes

Following the announcement of the failure of Shea, the powerful Spring-field tackle, to meet the entrance requirements, Fordham football followers were stunned when Miles, the great tackle from Washington and Lee University, was declared ineligible by Athletic Director Lush.

Out, the former Colgate halfback, was another player who ran against the faculty snag. Out was eager to register in the Fordham Medical School, but his application for admission was among those rejected.

"THE RABBIT'S" COLUMN By Walter J. Maranville SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

I DO not believe in comparing the various players who will take part in the World's Series. Figures and "dope" are all very good, but in a short series the statistics are liable to receive a terrific bump. Last Fall there were few persons who classed Hank Gowdy with Wallie Schang. But in the World's Series Gowdy looked like a million-dollar proposition, while the Athletics' star failed to startle the baseball world by his playing in the big games. I have always rated Gowdy as one of the greatest catchers in the major leagues, but most of the statistic experts did not think very well of Hank before our battles with the Mackmen.

I MAVE greatly enjoyed reading Hugh Fullerton's "dope" on the World's Series. I don't believe much in "dope," as I have already stated, but an expert like Fullerton often hits the mark squarely. In reading the article on Bancroft and Scott, I noticed that he rated the Phillies' star slightly higher than he did Scott. Bancroft is a dazzling player, but in my opinion Scott is every bit as classy as the lad from Philly. I believe that Scott will be one of the big stars in the World's Series. Speaker, Shore, Cravath and several other Red Sox players have received more press notices than Scott, but the Indiana boy is nevertheless entitled to much credit for the fine showing he has made in the field this year.

SCOTT is one of the greatest shortstops in the game today. I have naturally followed his work closely since he joined the Red Sox, as Boston "fans" have a habit of comparing him with me. Scott is a youngster in age and experience, but he is the type of ball player who will improve with a big bang in an important series. Scott lacks nerves. He very seldom gets excited. If he gets to make four or five errors in a row, it would not disturb him. He would keep right on the job and would be just as anxious for his next chance on account of an attack of nerves.

SCOTT is also a fighter. He is encouraging his pitcher all the time, while he is sprinkling enough "pep" around the infield to keep all hands going at top speed. He does not know as much baseball as Barry, but Barry also makes a wonderful side-partner for the former Mackman.

* * *

SCOTT'S batting average is not an impressive one. Wise baseball men declare that a shortstop is not supposed to be a free hitter. The Red Sox infielder, however, hits the ball gamely. He is also good in a pinch. He has the courage to take a healthy swing at the pellet and will not give an inch of ground even when the mighty Johnson is shooting 'em across the plate with all of his terrific speed. I am giving you this tip on Scott. Now watch the boy travel in the big show.

* * *

BILL CARRIGAN is also very fortunate in having a wealth of utility infielders. In Dick Hoblitzell and Del Gainer he has two high-class first basemen. Both, of course, know more about Hobby than I do about baseball, as we played together for some time in the National League. Hobby will probably do the batting when the clubs are opposed by a right-hand pitcher, while Gainer will bat against the southpaws.

* * *

JANVRIN and Wagner are swell utility men. There are few ball players who know more baseball than Wagner. Boss Stallings is a great admirer of the Red Sox veteran. Stallings battled against Hehnig in the American League and consequently knows his value to a ball club. Janvrin today is more brilliant than Wagner, and if he should get into the series and have one of his winning streaks, Boston "fans" would see some dazzling playing.

* * *

JANVRIN is not given the credit he is entitled to by Boston "fans." He was an important factor in the success of the Red Sox this year. He took Scott's place when the latter was hurt. He played sensational ball. His playing was as good that Scott had a hard job getting his regular berth back again. Janvrin has also been used at third and second base this year. It is not an easy task for a player to show to advantage when shifted from one position to another. Janvrin, however, has done well wherever he has been placed and is liable to score with a few stiff jolts if he gets into some of the games with the Phillies.

Harvard Wants Intercollegiate Title Track Meet

The intercollegiate track meet for 1916 will be held in the Harvard Stadium next Spring if Manager Freddy Clement of the Harvard track team has anything to say about it. Clement is in the fight to land the meet until the last shot is fired and expects to accomplish his purpose at the Winter meeting of the Intercollegiate Association.

Manager Clement said today:

"The Intercollegiates for next Spring would fit quite well into Harvard's track plans. When the proper time comes, we will be avowed candidates for the games and I trust that we will have sufficient votes with us to bring the meet to the Stadium. We have the finest track in the country, barring none, and I believe that athletes of other colleges would prefer our field to that of any other member of the association. At any rate we will be in the fight to a finish, and I hope that we will come through a winner."

Clement denied that Harvard is to drop out of track as has been intimated. The meet on May 7 on the Moakley's park preserves with the annual Harvard-Yale engagement spiked for the Stadium a week later. A practice meet with Technology is also a probability the latter part of May.

Forty-on Harvard Squad.

Forty runners are now in training under Coach Alfred Shrubb for the Harvard cross-country team. Training table will begin for seven hill and dale runners next Monday as follows: K. E. Fuller, '16; R. W. Babcock, '17; R. H. Davison, '17; C. J. North, '17; Captain R. T. Twitchell, '16, and W. P. Whitehouse 2d., '17.

HARVARD WINS FIGHT TO KEEP YALE GAME

The first lot of application blanks for seats at the Harvard-Yale game were sent out today by the Harvard Athletic Association after the building department's board of appeals had reversed the decision of Building Commissioner Patrick O'Hearn and issued permits for the erection of wooden stands at the open end of the Stadium.

It was Building Commissioner O'Hearn who assisted Frederick W. Moore, graduate manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, through the formal details of submitting his appeal from the commissioner's decision to the board of appeals. And it was at the request of the commissioner that this appeal was attended to ahead of other business.

The board formally reversed the decision of the commissioner and has drafted a letter to Mr. O'Hearn informing him that the erection of stands is within the building law, and ordering him to issue the permit.

On the receipt of this letter today Commissioner O'Hearn made out the necessary permit and sent it to the Athletic Association. The proposed wooden stands will increase the seating capacity of the Stadium to 47,000 or 49,000. About 20,000 of these seats will be allotted to Yale men. The last day for allotting seats on applications will be November 4. Seats not allotted by November 4 will be placed on sale between that date and the day of the game.

Giannini Will Stay.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 2.—Guy Nickalls, coach of the Yale crews, arrived in New Haven and will begin work immediately with the oarsmen. Referring to the recent resignation of E. J. Giannini, the freshman coach, Nickalls said that Giannini's contract had still this year to run and he would be here for the Fall and Spring work.

Harvard will meet the Massachusetts Agricultural College on the gridiron in the Harvard Stadium this afternoon at 2 o'clock and although there is practically little chance of the "Farmers" scoring a win over the Crimson a fine game is expected. The Crimson is down and out for the season for each of these teams and to both teams made fine showings in their initial contests there should be plenty of interest afforded the fans this afternoon.

The "Aggies" played a fine game against Dartmouth last Saturday at Hanover, holding the "Big Green" eleven to thirteen points. But for a stage fright during the first quarter when they were beating the "Farmers" harder than they did, all of the Dartmouth scoring was done in the first half of the game, after which the visitors settled down and gave Coach Cavanaugh's team a fine battle. Although Cugh's team a fine battle. Although the "Farmers" are the Crimson they expect victory over the Crimson they expect victory over the Crimson they expect victory over

The Story of a Doctor's Wife

Peterkin Gets a Good Nurse and Connie Ceases to Be Jealous

"Suddenly I knew myself as a foolish woman without adequate appreciation of my husband's battle for the life of Peterkin."

By the Wife
CHAPTER XIX

WHEN a woman begins to spy on her husband, her faith in him is gone and her pride is gone in herself. Every afternoon for a fortnight following the first visit of the beautiful Mrs. Kinney to Peter's office, I made some excuse to go into his waiting room. Almost daily my suspicions were justified in my own eyes. Mrs. Kinney was there. Each day she wore a different costume, culminating in its completeness, from the slippers and stockings that matched her lovely gowns to the wonderful contrasting hats that set them off. Once satisfied that she was there, I went over to my room and struggled with demons of torment.

An infected finger! And with that as an excuse Mrs. Kinney came daily to see my husband, whose love for the beautiful, it seemed to me, must prove the curse of my life.

I have always had what Henry James called "a ridiculously active imagination; if the door were not opened to it, it jumped out of the window. I went even further. If the window were bolted, my imagination broke the glass and dashed through. The only result of that was that I was gashed and lacerated by the jagged edges of broken glass. What matter?

Still I went on with my self-inflicted tortures, still I dashed myself through the pane never to soar, only to sink, hurt and bleeding, because of a flight and descent I had wantonly and wilfully chosen to take.

Every day when Mrs. Kinney was shut in his office with Peter, I shut myself in my own room. I would walk the floor with icy hands pressed to a throbbing heart. Waves of nausea seemed to rise in my throat and strangle me. I imagined all the dear intimate caresses that had been given to me lavished now on the lovely creature who was with him long hours—for an infected finger!

My ill would curl with scorn, and bitter thoughts of hatred would surge through my veins like flame. Then I would fling myself on my couch and sob and moan until the physical discomfort of my damp pillow caused me to lean to my feet and take up again my frantic pacing.

It seemed as if I would go mad from my imaginings—but even that relief was denied me, and I had to go on with my tortured and tortuous suspicions.

A REAL TROUBLE COMES

And then exactly as I deserved, a real trouble came upon me. Little Peterkin became desperately ill. He complained of being dizzy and of having a "hurt in his front." I was too proud to consult Peter and I took a certain joy in feeling that the baby was mine, all mine. If Peter were too absorbed in his "wounds" to bind tenderly I hugged that thought and the sarcasm with which I conceived it:) to notice his child's illness, I would not "bother" him with it.

At the end of four days I was driven to telling Peter that even if he was too busy to notice it I thought our boy was very ill.

"I have been busy, Connie. I hope the little chap hasn't developed what Peter gently. He never reproached me even when diagnosis finally proved that our baby had an acute pneumonia and a mastoid on the right side.

By now Lennore had finished her course of nursing and because I felt sure that her gratitude to me would make her aid Peter's fight for our baby's life with heart, as well as skill and training, I insisted that she be sent for. That decision changed the course of my whole life. It cost me more and taught me more than I had ever before learned.

Peter's fight for little Peterkin was a gallant one. Food and sleep he seemed to forget. Oxygen tanks for the baby's tortured lungs, and lancets for his throbbing ear, seemed all my husband knew. He himself changed the dressings and pulled out the wicks that were absorbing the pus from the cruelly inflamed mastoid bone.

He never faltered, he never hesitated. Other doctors were called in consultation—Messenger and Richards—but it was always Peter who did the delicate work that saved our baby in the end.

A SLEEPLESS TIME

For four weeks I never slept, except when Peter forced me to take bromides. For those four weeks I was an ineffective, sobbing wreck. The sight of little Dorothy goaded me to fury instead of consoling me. Suppose her brother, the son Peter had so wanted, were to die!

Suddenly I knew myself for an excitable, foolish woman whose vanity was hardly able to bear the final strain of my woman's battle with the Angel of Death, for the life of my child.

Through it all Lenore was calm and effective. She carried out orders and nourished and sustained Peter and her little patient. Her fear of my husband, her dislike even, seemed to have vanished.

She accepted him as a superior officer whose orders must be obeyed, and she obeyed them with a cleverness and precision and an initiative even, that had their share in saving my baby's life.

When it was sure at last that little Peterkin would live and that after a while he would be no worse for what he had gone through except for that scarring wound behind his ear, I collapsed like the coward I was. Peter and Lenore still went on quietly and efficiently as if nothing had happened.

THE STUMBLING BLOCK

"Peter, does that pretty Mrs. Kinnery still come here?" I asked one day as my husband sat by the bedside to which I had been relegated for a week of entire rest.

"No, she's cured, and, by Jove, it's a relief not to have that bandage in my nerve. She'd sob and moan and twist around half an hour before she'd let me take the bone fragment, and then faint and carry on so that I'd have to waste two hours on her, when twenty minutes would have done if she'd been able to act like a human being. No use talking, Connie, I like a woman with nerve. There's that little Lenore you have. She's a wonder. Helped me like a trump with the boy; never whimpered, though she must have been worn out most of the time, and now she's running this house, like clockwork and taking care of the babies while you're down and out. She's pretty as a little witch, too."

In my relief at the explaining away of all my wild jealousy and fear over the beautiful Mrs. Kinney it did not occur to me to take fright at Peter's calling Lenore "pretty as a little witch."

"Peter," I suggested, "if we could persuade her to stay and take care of Peterkin during his convalescence wouldn't it be wonderful? I know now my love isn't enough—the boy needs some one who is trained to understand his needs."

Peter's eyes lit up with a flash of relief. "Great! That'll save me a lot of worry over the boy, Connie. We'll ask her to stay." And so I brought into my life its most searing agony.

Red Tape

When old Machonichie came in, with his head looking like a balloon that had come down by mistake, the chemist did his best to appear sympathetic.

After about a yard and a half of plaster had been fixed to various parts of his cranium, the old man prepared to leave the shop.

"I have always taught my son," he murmured sadly, "to count five before speaking, but I know now that was a mistake."

"Really, sir!" answered the chemist. "I should have thought it was an excellent plan."

"No, I don't think so. For instance, this morning I was standing at the back door instructing him how to dig up a flower bed, I saw his attention wandering. A look of excitement came into his eyes. He sprang forward, when he remembered the training he had received.

"Well," asked the chemist, as the old man paused, "did he count five?"

"Oh, yes, he counted all right! But before he'd finished the chimney that he'd seen coming had fallen on my head! Good morning."

Right in Town

A clergyman recently announced that in the course of the week he expected to go on a mission to the heathen. "Why, bless our sir," one of his parishioners exclaimed, "you have never told us one word of this before. It leaves us unprepared! What shall we do?"

"Brother," said the minister solemnly, "I shall not leave the town!"

An idea of the extraordinary driving force imprisoned in succulent young mushrooms may be gathered from the fact that through a shop floor laid down in asphalt three inches in depth, in Dunedin, New Zealand, several mushrooms, from two to three inches in diameter, forced themselves up into the light of day. The asphalt in the near vicinity looked very much as if a pick had been at work.

Their Married Life

Warren Does Something That Rouses Helen's Utmost Indignation

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

HELEN had taken Winifred to school and left her in the care of the bland looking maiden lady who had charge. Mary had volunteered to help with the large wash that Helen and the rest had accumulated on the trip, and as the weather was decidedly cooler Helen planned to spend the day shopping.

The weather seemed a little more endurable. Surely the air was not so suffocating as it had been, and when Helen finally stepped out in the shopping district she felt decidedly like humming a tune.

The streets were just as crowded as ever. There were plenty of women in Fall suits, and those who did not wear suits had for a while thrown around their shoulders. Helen, who had not succumbed to the fad, saw no real beauty in the popularity of Summer furs, and so she experienced no feeling of envy.

She would look at suits that morning. Her hat that she had bought in San Francisco would do very well for the present, but she certainly did need a suit.

In the first store she entered the aisles were thronged with women on a still hunt for the bargains in waists advertised for that day. Helen hurried along, afraid that she would buy something that she did not need, and in the elevator tried to determine just what kind of a suit she wished to purchase. Suddenly she remembered that Warren had expressed a wish to go with her when she purchased her Fall suit; perhaps she ought to call him up and tell him that she intended to look at suits that morning. On second thought, however, she might have a suit that she particularly cared for sent home on approval, and then, if Warren did not care for it, it could be sent back.

AN EXPENSIVE SUIT

"Something in suits, madam?" as she hesitates before a hundred and twenty-dollar model of black velvet.

Helen started. "Why, yes," she said, "I am looking for a suit, but nothing so elaborate as this one."

"Take a seat, madam. What color did you wish, or haven't you decided on a color?"

"Something in blue, I guess," she answered. "My last Winter suit was brown, so I won't take anything in that shade."

The saleswoman smiled carefully as though she were afraid of being too human, and departed on a hunt for suits. She returned in a few moments with several which she threw carelessly over a chair.

"This is a very pretty model, in the new velour diagonal," she said, holding up a suit of blue and taking the coat by the collar. "Just slip the coat on? Here is a mirror."

Helen viewed herself critically. The suit was belted at the waist and the skirt was very full. She had somehow decided against a very full skirt for this Winter.

"Here is a suit with a narrow skirt," said the woman, holding up a suit trimmed with beaver. Helen seized it quickly. She liked it instantly. It was a blue suit of some soft material and had a collar and cuffs of beaver. The same fur edged the coat and the bottom of the skirt and the tailoring was very attractive.

"I like this one very much," she said, as she turned slowly before the glass.

"That is very smart, madam, let me hold the skirt up so that you can see the effect."

Helen felt quite at love with the suit and decided almost immediately to take it. So sure was she that Warren would approve that she produced her coin and said that she would take it home with her. Of course, it was expensive, but Warren was always talking against getting cheap things, and she felt perfectly justified in paying a good price.

"I'll see that you get this as quickly as possible," said the gratified saleswoman, going off with the suit on her arm.

Helen sat down to wait, and after an unusually long time looked up to see the woman returning, a man following her, and the suit still unwrapped.

The man bowed courteously.

"Mrs. Curtis?" he queried.

Helen bowed.

"I am very sorry to tell you this, but your charge account has been withdrawn from this house. Weren't you aware of it?"

"Certainly not," said Helen. "I am sure there must be some mistake."

"There is no mistake, madam, but I would be glad to do anything for you in the way of opening the account if you say so."

Helen thought a moment. How could Warren have done a thing like this without at least telling her of it? It was bitterly humiliating and she felt the color dye her face suddenly.

"Evidently my husband withdrew the account before we went West," she said, "and forgot to tell me. I will consult him before I decide to open the account again."

"Would you like to have the suit sent home on approval, Mrs. Curtis?"

"Yes, you might do that," said Helen, deciding suddenly. At least she would get something out of Warren's desire to hurt her. How dared he do such a thing? Helen's pretty chin held high, her perilously near tears, she walked toward the elevator.

Girls in World of Business

Showing That Those Who Play the Game Cannot Fail to Succeed

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TEMPTATION exists mostly for the people who look for it or invite it. This is not the hard-hearted statement of one who fails to sympathize with the troubles of her own sex—rather it is a generalization in which there are indeed exceptions.

All through the world, in every walk of life, there are unscrupulous and designing men. The girl who lives sheltered and protected in her own home meets with temptation. The girl who goes down to the business meets it, too, but in both cases not of the same kind. The girl who lies is unfortunate in the men with whom she comes in contact, or blunders on her own part invite catastrophe.

There are plenty of men in the world who are beasts of prey rather than human beings. From them nothing can be said, for silence is quite safe.

But the average man is a sane, decent person, with plenty of kindly instincts and a great deal of chivalry. Such a man respects nobody more than a self-respecting working girl who invites neither impudence nor familiarity. A good deal of the talk about the "wolf in sheep's clothing," who is the average employer, is hysterical and quite untrue.

THE PROPER WAY

If the girl who goes down to business goes clad in an armor of dignified self-respect, of efficient determination to do her work and do it well, and of faith in the fact that the world is built on the principle of "live and let live," she is likely to get on famously and to find herself quite undisturbed in her desire to do her work.

But does the average girl go thus equipped? Doesn't she rather have a little sneaking feeling that her sex is an asset—and one she might as well make the most of? Doesn't she dress to be attractive so that even office boys will gallantly sharpen pencils and run errands for her?

Doesn't she roll her big blue eyes at "the boss" when she wants to get a few extra afternoon hours off? Doesn't she invite admiration because she is a pretty girl rather than because she is an efficient worker?

If she does these things, is she justified in posing as a persecuted martyr when some man takes her at her own valuation and treats her as a forward coquette rather than as an efficient business woman?

Not all girls do go down to business with the idea that it is a superior sort of matrimonial agency or a place where feminine charm is to make feminine work a far easier thing than it would be if the employers were women.

Not all girls realize that the business girl is an adventuress who is looking for a mate, and that a little creature who is fair game for any man. But there are men who take this unfortunate view of the attitude toward women just as there are women who warrant men in taking it.

THE TEMPTATIONS

The temptations of a business girl are due directly to two things—the weakness in the armor of some silly girls who cause more dignified ones to be misjudged, and the wickedness in the natures of some men which a dignified girl by meeting and meeting well may possibly be able to lessen in alight degree.

The girl who goes down to business willing to do her work and not to be a toy-baby, and try to take advantage of her femininity to get her off from any difficulties, will meet with the protection of every decent man with whom she comes in contact.

That girl makes it easier for every other girl in the business world! The men who have met her and who know what a "white, honest little thing she is" remember her and treat all other working women with respect due to the germ of the idea that "white little things" engendered.

There is a fine chivalry in work for women. Women owe it to one another to uphold it. Every girl who behaves herself with dignity, who does her work well and who neither looks for trouble nor becomes panicky when she see actual signs of it, keeps that chivalry white and fine.

And when she meets with difficulty she will find there are plenty of splendid men ready to answer her with protection and to give her the "benefit of the doubt."

It does not pay for the business girl to look for trouble. It is beneath contempt for her to invite it. If she does neither of the two the difficulties that chance to beset her will be fairly easy to handle.

A Step Back 10,000,000 Years

What One Would Have Seen in the Age of Dinosaurs

As the hadrosaurus looked in life

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SOMETIMES when I am minded to go back of the traditional time of Adam and back, even, of the geological age-man's time, I take a walk through the dinosaur hall in the American Museum of Natural History in New York and look upon the bones, skeletons, restorations of restorations of animals which, according to official scientific information, "lived from three millions to ten million years ago." These dates are probably better established than any pertaining to early Egyptian or Mesopotamian history, which pretend to go back only five or six thousand years.

And as I pass, wandering, among the gigantic forms of brontosaurus, allosaurus, tyrannosaurus, hadrosaurs, iguanodons and trachodons, some of which could have put their dreadful heads through second or third story windows as easily as a horse feeds from the hay-rack over its manger, I reflect upon the marvelous preservative qualities which have kept those ancient bones intact during such vast ages and lapses of time. If the evidence were not plain before our eyes we would refuse to believe these things to be possible.

Hosts of these stupendous monsters, in physical comparison with which a man is hardly more than an insect that their feet would crush, are represented in the great museum only by disjoint, and scattered ribs, vertebræ, thighs, jaws and teeth, but science is able to put these together and to supply the missing parts, ideally, as, for instance, in Mr. Knight's reproduction of the hadrosaurus, photographed on this page.

The hadrosaurus was a cousin of the trachodon, or duck-billed dinosaur, two mounted skeletons of which are to be seen in the hall of the dinosaurs. These are about thirty feet long and fifteen feet tall. Their immense bread, flat bills indicate that, notwithstanding their size, they were probably amiable creatures, which inhabited swampy places, as their great spread of toes also indicates, and lived mainly upon what they could scoop up from the mud and water, including shellfish and plants.

There is also to be seen in the museum a mummy of one of these creatures—a mummy millions of years old, preserved by nature herself. The actual texture of the skin of this ancient "reptile-bird" (for that is the significance of the word dinosaur) is preserved there.

"The animal is lying on its back," says an accompanying description, "and, in spite of its crushed condition, its form is easily distinguishable. It probably died on a sand bank, or near a shoal, where the hot winds dried up the flesh until the skin adhered to the bones like a close-fitting glove, and was subsequently buried by a flood."

And that occurred possibly ten million years ago! The sand banks, the hot sunshine, the gleaming water, filled with swarming life, the air humming with insects, the clouds, the rains—all those things had been familiar phenomena upon the earth for countless ages when that trachodon died in Montana, but man had not yet been thought of by Mother Nature! It clears the mind of cobwebs some of which occasionally accrete these relics and memorials of the preadamite world.

It is well to have before us unquestionable proof that the earth had a history before man appeared upon it. If it can be shown that the earth was inhabited by man in a preparatory step to the human age, well and good. But if it was not, it had its own sufficient reason for being. Those monsters may have been as interesting and important in the eyes of their creator as we suppose ourselves to be.

Nature was as kind to them as she is to us, and showed them an equally smiling face. She would not take a whit more pains to preserve our bones than she did to preserve theirs.

Anecdotes of the Famous

BILLY SUNDAY, the famous evangelist, once stopped a newsboy in Philadelphia and inquired the way to the postoffice.

"Up one block and a turn to the right," said the boy.

"You seem a bright little fellow," said Sunday. "Do you know who I am?"

"No!"

"I'm Billy Sunday, and if you come to my meeting tonight, I'll show you the way to heaven."

"Aw, go on!" answered the youngster; "you didn't even know the way to the postoffice."

Mark Twain was visiting H. H. Rogers, said an editor. Mr. Rogers led the humorist into his library.

"There," he said, pointing to a bust of white marble, "what do you think of that."

It was a bust of a young woman smiling her hair, a graceful example of Italian sculpture. Mr. Clemens looked, and then he said:

"It isn't true to nature."

"Why not?" Mr. Rogers asked.

"She ought to have her mouth full of hairpins," said the visitor.

The witty Samuel Wilberforce, Bishop of Oxford, had no patience with admirers who persisted in regarding him, with others of his cloth, as extraordinarily important.

A lady who met him one day at dinner evidently felt obliged to keep the conversation at a high level. She began with much solemnity.

"My lord, you must have had a great many serious questions to deal with in the course of your life. What is the most interesting difficulty you have had to encounter?"

The bishop's napkin was slipping away from him.

"Keeping a dinner napkin on this silk apron of mine," said he, as he clutched at it.

John D. Rockefeller tells this story on himself:

"Visiting a certain bright Winter day, I had for caddie a boy who didn't know me. An unfortunate stroke landed me in a clump of high grass.

"'My lad!' I said. 'What am I to do now?'

"'See that there tree,' said the boy, pointing to a tall tree a mile away. 'Well, drive straight for that.'

"I lofted vigorously and, fortunately, my ball soared up into the air; it landed and it rolled right on to the putting green.

"'How's that, my boy?' I cried.

"'Gee, boss,' he said, 'if I had your strength and you had my brains, what a pair we'd make!'"

Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the eminent musical composer, while traveling in Canada some time ago, had an amusing and remarkable experience. Suddenly his train pulled up at a little wayside station, and he and the other passengers were told something was wrong on the line, and that they must wait at least nine hours.

"Nine hours in this hole of a place!" exclaimed Sir Alexander. "Away from all civilization! How I hate its very name! But what is its name, by the way?"

Hearing his head out of the carriage window, he saw on a board in front of him the name of the depised station in large letters. It was "Mackenzie."

WHAT IS GOING ON IN BOSTON CHURCHES

Tomorrow will be "Rally Sunday" in many churches of this State.

Sunday schools will then plan for their Fall and Winter work and church organizations will outline their enterprises in benevolences and social service for the coming nine months.

Go-to-Church Day will be Sunday, October 10. This Sunday has been set apart by the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, buttons and banners have been circulated calling attention to the observance of the day.

Every neighborhood will be visited by committees from the different churches, calling upon the non-churchgoers to pay some heed to the work of the churches. Already committees are working with this idea in view in Roxbury and Dorchester.

Pastor G. R. Maguire of the Ruggles Street Church, Roxbury, is getting every one in his church at work, arousing interest in the church on this special day.

People's Temple, Columbus avenue and Berkeley street, under the charge of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Nazarian, is making preparations for large crowds of non-churchgoers. Special committees have been assigned to do work in the neighborhood.

At the Tremont Street Methodist Church a great neighborhood work is carried in under the ministry of the Rev. Dr. Kelly Jenness. Every one in the neighborhood will be at church on Go-to-Church Day if Dr. Jenness can have his way.

The popular methods of the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, acting pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church, have given a new lease of life to this old established church. The Sunday forum is attracting attention, where live timely topics are being discussed.

* * *

Go-to-Church-Day will lead up to the big Laymen's convention, which will begin in Tremont Temple Sunday, November 14. More than three thousand local laymen are interested in this movement. The principal address will be made by J. Campbell White of New York.

This is what the convention will bring to every man in Boston:

1—A larger conception of a Christian.

2—Increased efficiency as a worker in his church.

3—Suggestions for organizing his church for better service.

4—A deeper hold on the realities of the Christian faith.

5—Greater confidence in ultimate victory for Christ and the church.

6—A more accurate view of what the present world needs.

7—Help for more adequate cooperation with men of other communions in forwarding the common work of the one undivided church.

Bishop Lawrence has composed the following prayer which will be used daily before the coming of this great convention:

"We thank thee, O God, and praise thy name for the wonderful works done by the messengers of thy Son, Christ, throughout the world, for the bodies healed, minds enlightened, hearts purified and lives saved. Guide us, we pray thee, as we try to do our part in preparing the way for the coming of thy Kingdom. Keep from us prejudice and impatience; give us wisdom; increase in us such love for thee that we shall find fuller unity in thy service. By the power of the Holy Spirit kindle in our hearts a greater devotion to thee and so send us forth to call others into thy service. Stir up, we beseech thee, O Lord, the wills of all people; and hasten the day when all men shall live in the light and joy of thy Son Jesus Christ. Amen.

* * *

The Rev. J. Estlin Carpenter, principal of Manchester College, Oxford, England, will make an address before the Fall meeting of the Norfolk Unitarian conference in the Unitarian Church of Neponset, October 26.

* * *

The Roslindale Baptist Church has been enlarged and remodeled at an expense of $12,700. The First Baptist Church, Haverhill, has been renovated at an outlay of $7,000.

* * *

The annual meeting of the Baptist Framingham Association will take place at Natick, October 12.

* * *

Bishop Lawrence will conduct the preparation service at the opening of the annual State convention of the Massachusetts Sunday School Association, in the Church of the Incarnation, Broad street, Lynn, October 12. The convention will last three days.

* * *

Pastor G. R. Maguire of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church will teach boys in the neighborhood morality by giving moving pictures daily in the new hall of the symnasium, which is being erected at the back of his church at a cost of more than $18,000. These pictures will be made interesting to the boys and contain such knowledge as will be edifying.

Pastor Maguire says: "Make morality interesting to a boy and you have him every time."

The Rev. Wallace MacMullen of Drew Theological Seminary will speak before the Boston Methodist Social Union Monday, October 18, in People's Temple.

* * *

The Rev. George E. Heath of Boston Street M. E. Church, Lynn, sent 600 postal cards to his congregation, calling their attention to the church services.

* * *

A question box will be placed in the Clarendon Street Baptist Church, like Pandora's box, containing all the troubles and doubts of the congregation, to be answered by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, in the prelude of his Sunday sermons. The box will be found at the church doors and will be emptied every week.

* * *

A new portable chapel has been dedicated in Fall River, where it is to be used by the Portuguese branch of the First Baptist Church, under the charge of the Rev. Silva Leite.

* * *

The Rev. Samuel C. Beane has the record of being the longest resident pastor of the Unitarian church in New England, having been in charge of the church at Grafton for fifty years. The Rev. J. P. Franks has been rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Salem, for fifty years.

* * *

The pastors of the various churches in Camden, Me., have organized a local Civic League, which is looking after the best moral interest of the town.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong on the whole in New York at the close, after a session where irregularity prevailed most of the time. Late in the day the majority of the war industrials, motor car issues and steels showed gains. Railroads were irregular and like coppers, declined to be weak as a class. Among issues which sold at record high prices during the morning were Willys-Overland, Bethlehem Steel, American Car & Foundry and Miami. U. S. Steel sold at its highest since 1913 and Westinghouse since 1902. The strength of Westinghouse, which was a prominent feature, was partly due to the vote of its employes not to strike. Most advances at the close were fractional, and that was true of declines. But some issues showed substantial gains. Car & Foundry was up 11, American Locomotive 2¼, General Electric 1¾, General Motors 10, Mexican Petroleum 1¾, Westinghouse 3¾, Willys-Overland 2¾ and Pressed Steel 2. For a week-end session the New York market was very active. Share sales totalled more than 700,000 and bond sales $2,311,000. There was heavy profit-taking during the forenoon, but as has been the case all the week capacity for absorption was astonishing to bears. Operators who believe a reaction is overdue say that many industrials are selling higher than circumstances warrant, have found their calculations upset by buying by the foreign powers as to present and prospective earnings of war industrials and a number of other stocks. It is said that the busiest stock market weeks on record, the aggregate of sales for the year to date for that period is given as 9,188,300 shares, against 3,477,000 shares during $29,711,000. Sentiment is generally optimism at present. A business boom is expected.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

The New York bank statement reports that surplus reserve of clearing house members, according to actual condition, decreased $1,701,790 to a total of $105,872,120. The average condition decrease was $15,860,350 to a total of $102,300,680. There was no change in discounts, operations in money market conditions during the week. Foreign exchange was quiet and rates nominal. The French and British loan is regarded in banking circles as an assured success.

LOCAL LIST IRREGULAR.

Irregularity prevailed in Boston during the morning and the majority of active issues closed lower. There was less demand for copper shares than yesterday. They had a downward tendency as a class. Zincs were stronger on the foreign buying. Arizona Commercial was up a point to 4¾. Calumet & Arizona 1¼, Calumet & Hecla 3, Granby 1¼, Greene Cananea ¼, Nevada Consolidated ¼, Ray Consolidated ¼, Shattuck Arizona ¼, Utah Copper ¼, Utah Consolidated ¼, Boston Elevated ¼, Boston & Albany ¼, Boston & Maine ¼, Boston & Providence 2, Boston & Worcester ¼, Massachusetts Electric ¼, Mexican Petroleum 1¾, Miami ¼, Old Colony ¼, Pullman ¼, Quincy ¼, Reece Button Hole ¼, Torrington ¼, United Fruit 1¼, United Shoe Machinery ¼, U. S. Steel ¼, Westinghouse 3¾, Willys-Overland 2¾, Pressed Steel ¼, Lake Copper ¼, Mohawk ¼, North Butte ¼, Old Dominion ¼, Quincy ¼, Superior & Boston ¼, Superior & Pittsburg ¼, Tamarack ¼, Trinity ¼, Utah Apex ¼, Utah Consolidated ¼, Winona ¼, Wolverine ¼.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

A Kind of "Vindication" That Won't Win Many Votes for McCall

CANDIDATE McCALL of the Republican party opposed railroad regulation when President Roosevelt was making that the great issue of his administration. Mr. McCall's leading newspaper advocate declares that time has vindicated Mr. McCall's judgment. Let us see what is meant by vindication in this case.

We will pass by the railroad scandals of the last ten years, forgetting even the recent New Haven debauchery, for railroad scandals are so frequent, come so fast, that anything more than a year old seems like ancient history.

Therefore let us take the report just made by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the financial transactions of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company. We quote the opening paragraph:

> "In 1902 the main line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company extended from Chicago to Denver, with branch lines to St. Paul, Minneapolis and Kansas City. The territory served is one of the richest and most prosperous in the country and the system's ramification of branch lines insures to it a large volume of tonnage. It was THEN THRIVING and its PROSPECTS WERE PROMISING, its stock selling in the markets of the world AT MORE THAN $200 A SHARE. In 1914 the shares had fallen to $20 AND THE ROAD IS NOW IN RECEIVERS' HANDS. THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT THE EARNINGS OF THE RAILWAY COMPANY HAVE STEADILY INCREASED, AND THAT IN 1914 THEY WERE THE LARGEST IN ITS HISTORY."

Think of it! A prosperous railroad in one of the richest territories of the world, whose business was increasing rapidly in spite of mismanagement, is wrecked and bankrupted in twelve years by the chicanery and debauchery of its managers.

Consider this question which was asked one of the directors of the railroad at the hearing before the commission:

> Question. "And did it ever occur to you that in taking money from the treasury of the railway company, a public-service corporation, an additional burden was placed upon the passenger and freight traffic in order to make good the loss?"
> Answer. "No; I never thought of it in that light?"
> Question. "You don't believe it now, do you?"
> Answer. "No."

In New Hampshire today, this very day, investigation is revealing the fact that the poor, broken-down Boston & Maine was compelled by the Wall Street stock gamblers, who controlled it, to spend more than a million dollars in fighting to prevent the Grand Trunk from coming to Boston, an event which would have been one of the greatest boons to New England—an event for which our Massachusetts merchants devoutly prayed and worked.

Now the Boston & Maine is increasing its fares and freight rates in order to make up this loss and other losses which were incurred in fighting against the plain interest of the people of New England. In other words, the people of New England are obliged to pay the cost of fighting against their own welfare.

If stories like this, which are every day blotting the pages of American railroad history, constitute a vindication of Mr. McCall's railroad record, the people of Massachusetts will certainly be very glad to understand Mr. McCall's point of view and the point of view of his friends and supporters.

Japan Warns Us to Be Prepared for War

THE best evidence that we should be prepared for war has been supplied, strangely enough, not by the foremost thinkers of America, but by the master minds of a nation which is already planning the invasion and conquest of the United States—JAPAN.

Of Japan's hostile intentions toward us there can no longer be any doubt. In a book which has reached a circulation of 1,000,000 copies Japan's official and powerful National Defence Association frankly confesses its plans for cheating our inadequate navy, for seizing our island possessions and for landing in California an army of 200,000 men to overwhelm our own insignificant forces.

An accurate translation of the opening chapters of this remarkable Japanese "Bernhardi" was presented to the American public for the first time in last Sunday's AMERICAN. And tomorrow the Sunday AMERICAN will give the final instalment of the book whose every word emphasizes the folly of our unpreparedness for war.

In our present defenceless condition, what hope would there be of repelling the vigorous and merciless attack which Japan outlines in this astounding volume?

Before the great war broke out in Europe, General von Bernhardi, a member of Germany's General Staff, wrote and published a book called "Germany and the Next War." If the leaders in the countries now fighting the Germans had paid heed to that highly significant book the fortunes of their armies might have been different. They paid no heed and are paying and have been paying the penalty. For in his book Bernhardi very accurately and painstakingly outlined precisely the course that Germany has taken since war was declared.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The Japanese book, whose translation appears in the Sunday AMERICAN, is literally a Japanese "Bernhardi," so far as the United States is concerned.

Will the United States heed the warning or will it, as the allies did, heed it only when it is too late and the war, of which it was warned, is on?

> "There is no need, we think, of explaining how our soldiers will take San Francisco. We content ourselves in assuring the Japanese that it will be done.
> "We shall suffer losses, of course, but what more noble death than to die in the avenging of our honor on the very soil of a State and nation that has so ridiculed, insulted and injured us and ours? Could any fate be more glorious, everlasting and more pleasing to the ancestors of His Imperial Majesty, our Mikado?
> "California is now ours."

These are only a few of the significant prophecies translated from this most popular book in Japan today—the book which warns us of the war that is to end in the loss by the United States of its island possessions and its western coast.

Don't fail to get the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow and read this significant and official statement of Japan's intentions toward us.

Read and think well whether you will care to submit to the terms of the humiliating treaty of peace which Japan has already formulated to force upon a beaten United States.

True Preparedness

Beating the Germans to It

The Czar has taken command of the Russian army, it being apparently his last chance.

Give 'Em a Chance

If we are to persist in unpreparedness we might at least touch our citizens now to run.

In Which Case It Would Be Embarrassing

That loan to the allies might be all right, unless after the war Germany happened to be a preferred creditor of the borrowers.

A Reasonable Preference

"Why is it that you prefer to eat your lunch where they have girls to wait on the tables?"

"Because if thumbs must be thrust into the things I order I want them to be as small as possible."

More Truth Than Poetry

Lessons

TROUBLED little ten-year-old, doubled in your chair,
Puzzling over lesson books, filled with black despair.
Just outside the breeze is warm and all the skies are blue,
And not a bird or butterfly has any sums to do.
The care-free rabbits romp and run along the shaded lanes
With never any grammar books to tangle up their brains.
But how can little prisoners have any time to play
With lessons, lessons, lessons all the long, long day?

ON the sunlit river shore the quiet turtles bask,
Nor care about the answers to the questions teachers ask.
The brindle pup is sleeping in some soft and sheltered nook—
He doesn't need to learn to read from some dull prosy book.
The silver trout are leaping where the marsh-flies skim the pool,
And no one tries to wash them up and send them to a school.
But here one cannot laugh nor lark, one cannot even speak;
It's lessons, lessons, lessons all the long, long week.

ALAS! while rolls this weary world around the shining sun,
We never find that happy day when lesson time is done.
When from the dog-eared number books the little boy shall turn
He still will find a myriad of lessons yet to learn.
And when across his path of life the twilight shadows fall,
He'll know that no one in this world can ever learn them all.
For life is but a smile or two and toil and pain and tears,
And lessons, lessons, lessons all the long, long years.

"Ah, Well, Even Girls Are of Some Use!"

That Is What They Say in China—the More Soft-Hearted, Sympathetic Chinese—to the Afflicted Parents of a New-Born Baby Girl. Sometimes They Drown the Baby Girl. We in America Wouldn't Do That, Would We?

China is waking up.
The United States is waking up.
EVERYBODY is waking up.
The international alarm clock has gone off.
Stretch—and join the procession.

A lovely little Chinese lady has come all the way to Boston, from her Oriental home, to study music at one of the many Boston institutions which are known around the world.

Boston's little Chinese lady is Mrs. Feng Fung Chin. With her is young Mr. Feng, already a graduate of Princeton, who will study further at Harvard.

The Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will publish new pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Feng. These photographs will make you THINK. At first, you will say that here is an extremely GOOD-LOOKING couple. Then you will be asking yourself if all this can have been brought about in only a few years; if the women of China have already progressed so far, along the highway towards emancipation, that they travel all the way to the United States, with their young husbands, to study music.

Within our time, NO Chinese woman would have dreamed of such a thing. No Chinese gentleman would have tolerated the THOUGHT of it.

It was the custom in China, you know—certainly until the week before last, seems like—to greet the arrival of a GIRL baby quite as if the family had been visited by Death.

"If the baby is a girl," we are told by a recent and distinguished writer, "the parents are considered to be more in need of sympathy than congratulation, and the kindest remark any soft-hearted visitor can possibly be expected to make is, 'Ah, well, even girls are of some use!'"

Not unfrequently when a little girl is born, its parents will drown it rather than have the trouble of bringing it up. SOME women have destroyed as many as five or six little girls in this way. To save the babies from being put to death, kind-hearted Chinese have established Foundling Hospitals in many cities.

The better classes, to be sure, take the blow with more philosophy. THEY console themselves by naming the unwelcome visitor Chien-ti, which means "Lead along a brother," or Lai-ti, "Come younger brother."

Much prettier names, for girl babies in China—where, of course, there are people of good heart and kind intent, just as there are in every other country under the sun—are Pearl, Fragrance, Peace, or Narcissus, Lily and Rose.

Little Mistress Feng talks with animation in a Sunday AMERICAN interview. You will LIKE her story. Her picture is sweet. We should not be surprised if her given name is Lily. Certainly we are glad no horrid old river got her. Ugh!

In the United States, of course, we are kind to little girls. It is only when they grow up to be twenty-one, and ask for the privilege of the vote, that we think of "taking steps."

A man politician spoke last night out at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, where the Honorable W. Murray Crane's organization got together for a Night Before celebration of today's convention in Tremont Temple.

This man was a TYPE. He said:

"I don't see what's got into our women, lately. They didn't used to bother about the Vote and such nonsense. They got these new-fangled notions from the West. I believe they'll drop Suffrage after a while. If we just put our feet down hard, we'll discourage them. Then they'll pick up something else. They're a strange lot."

If there are many men in today's convention like this chap, our friends, the Equal Suffragists, will again receive short shrift from the Grand Old Party.

This man said—and he believes—that Equal Suffrage is a "new-fangled notion," and comes out of the West.

Poor, blind man-politician!

When the American Equal Rights Association was born, in 1866, Mr. Crane was a boy of thirteen, "Sam" McCall was two years older, Grafton Dulany Cushing was beginning to walk. David I. Walsh had not been born.

And "out of the West," indeed!

Massachusetts will ONE day—and that SOON—recall with proper pride that the first President of the American Equal Rights Association was Lucretia Mott, native of the Island of Nantucket.

One of the foremost of American writers on Equal Suffrage is Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, of Dorchester.

"Out of the West," indeed! We have before us a report of the First Anniversary of the American Equal Rights Association, observed in the Church of the Puritans, New York, on May 8 and 10, in the year 1867. For three days the United States Senate had been discussing votes for women. Nine Senators voted in favor of Equal Suffrage. FORTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO!

The secretary, Susan B. Anthony, presented a report. May we quote from it?

Two of our agents, Lucy Stone and Henry B. Blackwell, are already in Kansas, speaking in all her towns and cities—in churches, schoolhouses, barns and the open air; travelling night and day, by railroad, stage and ox-cart; scaling the rocky divides and fording the swollen rivers—their hearts all aglow with enthusiasm, greeted everywhere by crowded audiences, brave men and women, ready to work for the same principles for which they have suffered in the past, that Kansas, the young and beautiful hero of the West, may be the first State in the Union to realize a genuine republic.

All of which, today and in this presence, is printed by way of calling attention to the fact that two weeks from today Massachusetts will see, in Boston the greatest street parade and demonstration ever held on the North American continent in favor of Equal Suffrage.

The Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will tell all about this great Suffrage demonstration of Saturday, October 16. The Sunday AMERICAN will also tell what the "Antis"—the Massachusetts Association, Opposed to Equal Suffrage—propose to do about it. The "Antis" have arranged a silent protest. They will wear—and distribute— RED ROSES.

Another entertainment to be spread before the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN tells about the WAR IN BOSTON HARBOR.

A fight is about to begin for possession of the fortifications down the bay. The fighters will be soldiers of the United States. Their sham battle will reveal whether it would be possible for an enemy to come in and take possession of Boston.

The PRESENT fortifications in the Harbor were planned twenty-five years ago.

At that time the Benbow was the "type" ship of the British Navy. The maximum range of the Benbow was THREE MILES.

How times have changed, and war styles with them!

Read this Sunday AMERICAN story, which brings war to the front door of Boston, and join every reasonable effort for preparedness.

But one could write a BOOK about tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, and follow THAT book with a second.

There will, for example, be a detailed story of the plans now going forward in honor and for the entertainment of Lord and Lady Aberdeen.

The former Viceroy of Ireland is John Campbell Gordon, Viscount Formartine, Lord Haddo, Methlick, Tarkes and Kellie, in the Peerage of Scotland, seventh Earl of Aberdeen, and, now, Marquis of Aberdeen and Temair. His estates comprise 68,000 acres. Lady Aberdeen was the Hon. Ishbel Maria Marjoribanks.

In the fourteenth century, the Scottish possessions of the Gordons extended from the German Ocean to the Atlantic.

Boston's wonderful reception to the Aberdeens, however, is by way of recognition of their great work for the common weal, principally in Ireland. The Sunday AMERICAN will tell all about it.

One week from tomorrow will be Go-to-Church-Sunday, as every Sunday SHOULD be.

We were instructed to say a word about that. In this connection we desired to discuss John Gutenberg, the inventor of printing, and the vision he had in the cloisters of Aberganais.

"John Gutenberg," said the spirit, "thou hast made thy name immortal, but ah! at what a price."

Gutenberg had "great searchings of heart with respect to his portentous discovery."

We wanted to point out how the Press and the Pulpit might co-operate and why they SHOULD work together. If, somewhere, you will find the story of Gutenberg's vision, you will know what we meant to say. And the exercise will be helpful.

A copy of the AMERICAN Sunday Monthly Magazine goes tomorrow with EVERY copy of New England's greatest Sunday newspaper. On the cover of the Magazine is a painting, in colors, by Mr. Harrison Fisher, of Miss Kay Laurell, one of THE beauties of the American stage.

P. S.—We have just shown the Kay Laurell picture to the Night Man, who has also read these few feeble remarks as they have come from the typewriter. "Say!" he says, "I can't write, but if I lived in China, you understand, and Kay Laurell was a Chinese kid, and—understand me?"
